Roosevelt Ignores New York Newspaper Hints That He Is Near Nervous Prostration.

IS OUT AFTER DELEGATES

Wants Pledge That His Policies Will Be Carried Out, but Will Decline Nomination.

BY RAYMOND.

Washington, D. C., April 5.—[Special.]—No one at the White house thinks it worth while to dignify by an answer the stories which have been printed in New York and elsewhere yesterday and today to the effect that President Roosevelt has been suffering from an attack of incipient nervous prostration and that he might be compelled to take a rest to recover his health.

These stories originated exclusively in the newspapers which have had the warmest affiliations with the great financial interests, and the inference is obvious that they were put out in a concerted manner as the only possible means of diverting public opinion from the revelations made by the president in his correspondence with E. H. Harriman and from his subsequent declarations that a gigantic financial conspiracy had been organized to defeat him and his policies and prevent the election of a man of his type as his successor.

Some of these offensive publications have gone to the extent of intimating that the president's mind has been seriously affected by his long, hard term of office and that he needs a rest from active work to restore him to future usefulness.

Not Worthy of Notice.

These allegations of incipient nervous prostration all come from sources which render them open to suspicion, and the White house people and cabinet officers do not consider them on that account worthy of serious answer.

People who visit the White house almost daily, including many of the correspondents of the great newspapers, know that President Roosevelt's mind is as clear, as logical, and as sane as ever it was. He thinks rapidly, speaks incessantly, and says what he means to every man who comes into his presence. He does not allow other men to talk a great deal, but there is never any doubt as to what he is saying.

He is nervous, as all men of his mentality are nervous. He is a literary man as well as a statesman, possesses a good deal of the mind of a poet, is fond of birds and wild sports and is with it all an ideal executive, because he has the faculty of turning his mind from one subject to another with the rapidity of lightning, and he grasps outlines if not details with surprising promptness and accuracy.

Such a man, constructed on such nervous lines, is not half as likely a subject for nervous prostration as a big, burly, slow going, intellectual animal who finds it difficult to adapt himself to varying conditions, and who breaks down under the burden of labor which rolls off the shoulders of a man like Roosevelt and leaves him in the morning untainted by the hard work of the day before.

Roosevelt Not Breaking Down.

Theodore Roosevelt is not breaking down either mentally or physically. So much the worse for the Harrimans, Rockefellers, Tillmans, Baileys, Storers, and other people who have crossed his path and who would like to see him break down at the earliest possible moment. He has had a hard winter, full of engrossing cares, and springtime has not been a gentle one at the White house. It would be no wonder if the president were a bit tired, and a less strenuous man would have gone on an extended vacation tour long before this.

But as for the idea of nervous prostration or a mental breakdown, nothing could be further from the truth than this absurd story which is being industriously circulated by those people representing large financial interests who always have opposed the president and who are now trying to deceive the people into believing that his present policy is a result only of an excited imagination, and that he is conjuring up combinations which never have and never can exist.

Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania has indignantly denied that he was in any way responsible for the story that a $5,000,000 combination had been formed to beat the Roosevelt policies and Roosevelt himself wherever his personality could be reached. Frank L. Barstow of the Standard Oil company is reported to have said the story was absurd.

No Attention to Penrose.

At the White house no attention was paid to Senator Penrose's denial for the reason, as semi-officially explained, that no names were mentioned when the story of the combination was first given out with the president's sanction, and no charges have been made by the White house that Senator Penrose or anybody else had been at the dinner when the combination was first reported.

Senator Penrose telephoned to a friend in Washington tonight authorizing him to say:

"The Pennsylvania delegation and I have been in favor of President Roosevelt in the past and we are for him and his policies now, and will be for him and his policies in the future."

Secretary Loeb Was There.

According to current gossip this remarkable dinner at which Senator Penrose is said to have let the corporation cat out of the bag was given by Senator Bourne of Oregon a little while before congress adjourned, and was attended among others by Senators Penrose and Hansbrough. In addition to them there was reported to have been at dinner Secretary Loeb, and he is supposed to have reported to the White house the remarkable declaration made by Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania, who has always been a friend of the administration ostensibly, but who at the same time really represents elements which are far removed from the policies inaugurated by President Roosevelt.

It is generally admitted now that any statements Senator Penrose might have made at that time, if he did make any, and if he was there at all, were more or less in the nature of an elephantine joke, but they certainly were taken seriously at the White house, and there is no reason to believe the president doubts them in any way now.

Whether Senator Penrose or any other man made remarks attributed to him at any such dinner or anywhere else, there is one fact that cannot be misunderstood. That is, that President Roosevelt and those chiefly in his confidence are convinced of the fact that a gigantic combination of financial interests

CZAR IN TERROR, TO QUIT THRONE?

London Mirror Announces That Nicholas Will Turn Reins of Government Over to Brother.

NEW ALLIANCE MAY COME

Marriage of Grand Duke Michael and Princess Victoria Expected to Change Political Map of Europe.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, April 6, 3 a. m.—The Mirror, a sensational picture paper, which is owned by the proprietors of the Daily Mail, professes to have excellent authority for stating that the czar will abdicate within a month and that his brother, the Grand Duke Michael, will be appointed regent during the minority of the czarovitch.

The Mirror says the czar at times is unable to sign his name, and that whenever any state matter is broached to him he trembles like a frightened child. Something like a panic has long reigned in the royal household. The czarina is almost in the same heartbroken, pitiable plight as her husband. The certainty of his forced abdication, which long has been dawning upon him, has been hastened by the drift of circumstances and his own breakdown. Now, tired of it all, he is willing enough to sink into obscurity and yield the reins of office to a stronger man. The Grand Duke Michael is grief-stricken over his brother's condition. He has shrunk from the responsibility of taking over control of the great empire, but as a result of a series of family conclaves, in which the dowager czarina took a leading part, he has been convinced of the necessity of sacrificing himself.

Michael to Wed Victoria.

The Mirror also claims that the visit of the dowager czarina to England, which ended on Friday, when she started for Biarritz in company with her sister, Queen Alexandra, was due to the Russian political situation. She came here for the purpose of negotiating a marriage between the Grand Duke Michael and Princess Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein, one of the most popular of English royalties, who was a great favorite of the late Queen Victoria.

The princess accepted the proposal, and the marriage may take place in April or during the first week of May if nothing happens to upset the arrangements. The wedding possibly will take place in England, but more likely on the Riviera. It will be entirely without pomp, although possibly there will be a grander ceremony at St. Petersburg later. As the law of the Russian court compels the wives of the members of the imperial family to belong to the Greek orthodox church, it will be essential for the Princess Victoria, who is a Protestant, to join that communion.

Courtship Will Be Brief.

The dowager czarina, who was reared as a Protestant, had some difficulty in persuading the Princess Victoria to change her religion, but she finally prevailed.

The courtship will be brief, for thus far the Grand Duke Michael has not personally proposed marriage, the matter having been entirely arranged by others. The Princess Victoria, however, is well acquainted with the Grand Duke Michael. She is a frequent correspondent of the Russian imperial family and one of the dowager czarina's principal female friends.

King Edward's position, says the Mirror, has been one of strict aloofness throughout the negotiations. When he was approached on the subject he positively declined to have anything to do with it, leaving the matter entirely to Princess Victoria herself. He would not even listen to any reference to the matter, although he may possibly attend the wedding.

Immediately the regency is declared some important diplomatic changes will be made. Count Benckendorff will be promoted from the embassy here to one of the highest appointments in St. Petersburg. He is a great favorite of the dowager czarina, who considers his knowledge and experience indispensable to the Russian government in its present crisis. What is more important is the fact there will be a complete alteration of the European situation.

Will Change Political Map.

The resulting change primarily will mean a great step towards a complete Russo-British entente, to which France may be a party.

Great Britain, France, and Russia then will form the most powerful combination in Europe.

Germany's influence, as a consequence, will wane considerably. The dowager czarina, like all true Danes, hates Germany, and it is a fact that the czarina, who is of German birth, has been responsible for frequent quarrels between them.

Regarding Russia's future, the Mirror says, the Grand Duke Michael already has formed his policy, which has been discussed and approved in the family conclaves. He will summarily end the duma and all other attempts at representative government. A military dictatorship will be established under Gen. Count Ignatieff. The world will acclaim it a reign of blood and iron, but that will not be the case.

The grand duke is a man in whom great severity is blended with kindness and he is a statesman of high order. He says, in effect, that in Russia the only thing that is respected is brute strength.

Grand Duke Outlines Policy.

"It would be better," he adds, "for Russia to have a hundred thousand persons slain in one day and then enjoy tranquillity than that month after month a sacrifice of blood be poured out without any progress. Seventy-five per cent of the Russians are illiterate. I will establish schools all over the empire. We will break down the stupendous ignorance of the people first, and then, step by step, we will give them their representation, but I will crush out the spirit of rebellion by which, at the behest of a few fanatics, ignorant peasants are made the sacrifice."

The grand duke is an intense admirer of England and England's institutions. With the help of an English wife, he will hold England up as an example to be copied.

In Russian court circles the utmost enthusiasm prevails. A new spirit now permeates things, succeeding the blank dismay of the past few months, and there is bright anticipation, qualified, however, by the knowledge that the first days of the new reign may be days almost of terror.

Gloomy View in Capital.

No hint of any sort comes from St. Petersburg to support the Mirror's story. Some English correspondents there, however, take

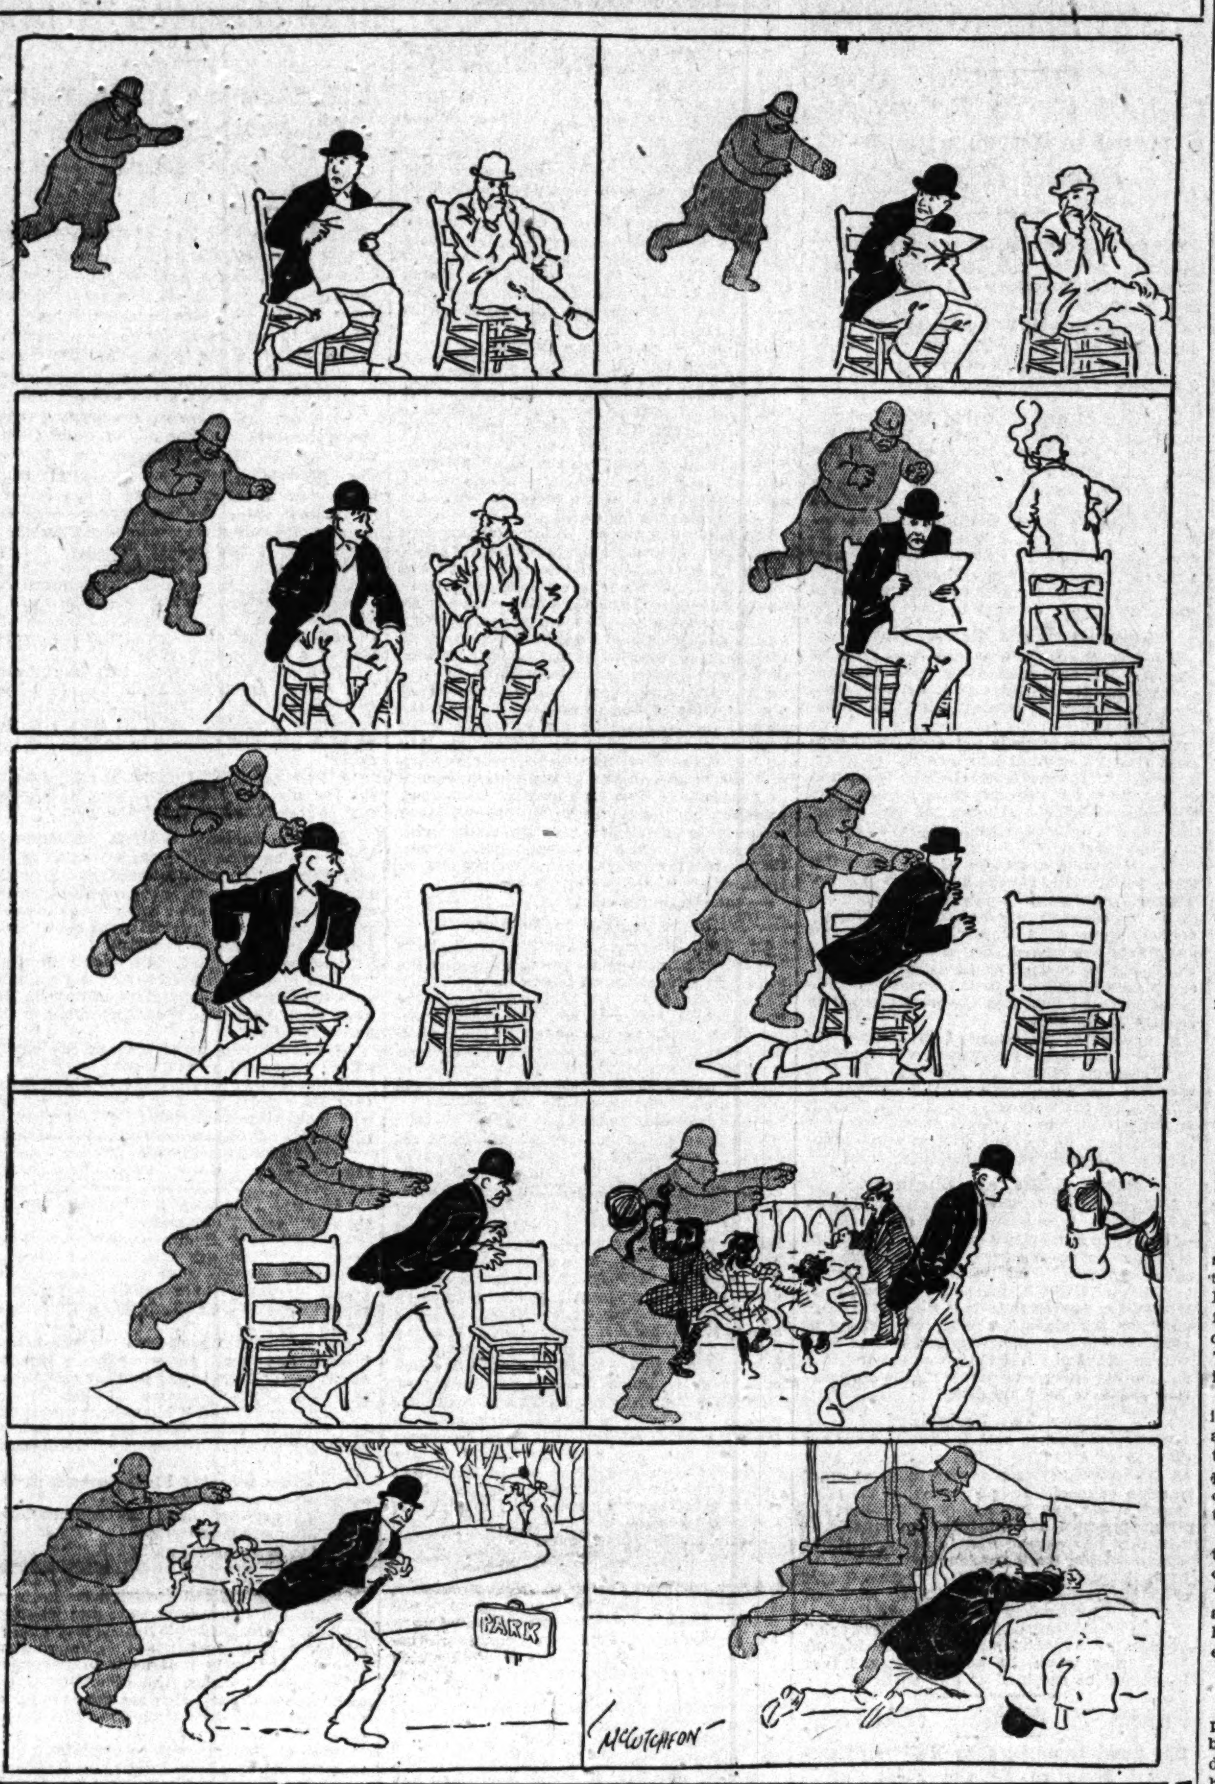
THE MURDERER.

A Study in Conscience.



CARNEGIE HAS ODD GUESTS.

Bankers and Hod Carriers Mix with Lawyers and Teamsters.

CALLS IT A PEACE EVENING.

Archbishop Tells Funny Story, Bartender Praises the Lunch.

New York, April 5.—[Special.]—Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Carnegie were at home this evening to about 300 teamsters, bankers, hod-hoisters, lawyers, stone cutters, capitalists, carpenters, clergymen, bricklayers, publicists, and other artisans. It all came off at the magnificent Carnegie home at Ninety-first street and Fifth avenue, and its name was an "international peace evening," under the auspices of the National Civic federation.

The guests were invited for 8:15 and as the talking did not begin until nearly 9 o'clock they had ample opportunity to wander through the spacious rooms of the big house and admire what they saw.

The distributing point for the arrivals was the great hall. Thence they passed into the drawing room, where Mr. and Mrs. Carnegie and Miss Whitfield, Mrs. Carnegie's sister, were waiting to receive them. Ralph M. Easley, who knows everybody in the camps of both employers and employés, was there to see that all hands were properly indentified.

Some Strange Contrasts.

The big rooms were full of contrasts, which will perhaps be made evident by the mere recital of a few names. Among the contrasts seen were Charles M. Schwab, president of the Bethlehem Steel company, and Daniel J. O'Keefe, president of the International Longshoremen's union; Leslie M. Shaw, ex-secretary of the treasury, and Robert J. Riddell of the double drum hoisters; George Haven Putnam and William J. Skinner of the stone setters' union; the Rev. Dr. Lyman Abbott and Henry Kossow of the bartenders' union; John D. Crimmins and Michael Brayer of the clothes spongers' union; Adolph Lewisohn and D. C. Davis of the bricklayers' union; Woodbury Langdon, capitalist, and Ed Gould of the teamsters' union; Thomas M. Mulry, banker, and ex-Assemblyman Thomas Rock of the pavers' union; John R. Van Wormer, vice president of the Lincoln Trust company, and Henry O. Cole of the bricklayers' union; L. Winnmuller, importer, and John Hanley of the upholsterers' union; Dr. Silas McBee and P. Stadtmuller of the house shorers; the Rev. Stephen S. Wise and A. Helthaler of the metal polishers' union; Prof. Irving Fisher and Tito Bacelle of the excavators' union; W. C. Brown, vice president of the Lake Shore railroad company, and Edward Hannah of the blue stone cutters' union.

Have Their Picture Taken.

It was H. H. Vreeland who shouted, a few moments before 9 o'clock:

"Now please vacate the hall so that the chairs can be placed."

Then he added from force of habit:

"Step lively, please."

Accordingly everybody stepped lively, row after row of little gilt chairs were arranged, and the guests took their seats, the overflow being accommodated upon the broad staircase that looked down upon the pipe organ that is installed at the eastern end of the hall. It was here that the speakers stood, and it was here, too, that the camera men arranged their instruments, and after Mr. Carnegie had insisted on having Mr. Belmont stand with him when the flash came the picture was taken.

Then Mr. Carnegie jumped upon a couch that stood by the tall chime clock and called the guests to order. Archbishop Farley and Mgr. Lavelle had come in a few minutes before and they occupied chairs beside the organ. Just beside the archbishop sat Seth Low, while Mr. Belmont perched himself upon the organ bench. A little to one side stood T. V. Powderly, the old labor leader. John Mitchell was not far away.

Carnegie Welcomes His Guests.

Mr. Carnegie first welcomed those present as his guests, in the name of Mrs. Carnegie and himself. He said that he thought it peculiarly appropriate to have an industrial peace evening so soon before the great peace conference. Peace, like charity, should begin at home. He went on to urge the virtues and the necessity of arbitration in industrial matters as well as in international disputes.

Mr. Carnegie went on to say that the real cause of most strikes was not trouble about wages, but the failure of employers to give sufficient recognition to their men. He concluded by saying how delighted he and Mrs. Carnegie were to welcome both employers and employés beneath their roof.

"It is something that we will remember all our lives," he said, "and it is another instance that I shall look back to in after years when I become an old man." Then he smiled and everybody laughed, and Mr. Belmont took the couch, while Mr. Carnegie climbed upon the organ bench and sat there swinging his feet.

Belmont Sounds Warning.

"There is no time more important than this for a gathering of this nature," began Mr. Belmont, speaking very slowly and evidently choosing his words with the utmost care. "It is easy to remain at peace during prosperous times, but sometimes times change. The development and progress of our country have been unparalleled, but I feel impressed with the belief that the time has about come when we must expect a halt. It is not wholly undesirable.

"I do not desire to pose as a prophet or as an alarmist, nor will I discuss the causes that appear to have led us to this situation, but it is unquestioned that we should prepare ourselves through just such gatherings as these to understand and solve the problems with which we are likely at any time to be confronted."

Archbishop Tells a Story.

Archbishop Farley told a story about a man who had always treated his employés as well as they could ask. Then came hard times and his employés came to complain about their wages.

"I can't raise them," he said. "I'm doing the best I can."

"We know that," they said. "We want you to lower them 25 per cent."

"I won't do it," he said.

"All right," said the men. "We'll strike."

After Mr. Powderly had made a brief talk the guests swarmed into the billiard room, where a buffet supper was served.

"Gee," said one of the delegates from the bartenders' union as he surveyed the spread, "take it from me; there ain't no other free lunch like that nowhere on the map."

AND NOW THERE ARE ONLY 27

One of Pittsburg's "Unsullied Sons" to Wed Divorcee.

PAPERS IN CASE SUPPRESSED

Arthur Nevin, Poet, to Marry Wife of His Former Friend.

Pittsburg, Pa., April 5.—[Special.]—There was a decided break today in the ranks of the unsullied sons of Pittsburg, better known as the "righteous squad," which the chamber of commerce last night held up to the world as paragons. It was announced that Arthur Nevin, the poet and musician, one of the "famous 28," tomorrow would be married in New York to Mrs. Mazie Lynham Dean, the heroine of a sensational divorce here last June.

Mrs. Mazie Lynham Dean was the former wife of Dr. Davis A. Dean of Pittsburg, one of the best known opticians in the state. There was such a mass of sensational testimony given in the case that it was thought best to have it suppressed entirely.

Was Once a Governess.

The wedding is booked for Marble Collegiate church, New York, at 11 a. m. tomorrow, the Rev. David Burrell officiating. Mrs. Dean, who since her divorce has made her home in Washington, D. C., is understood to be at the Grenoble hotel, in New York, now. Twelve years ago she came to Pittsburg as governess in the family of Attorney Thomas Marshall. Dr. Dean, who is a relative of the Marshall family, met her there, fell in love with her, and married her. They had two children.

They lived in fine style at Sewickley, a fashionable suburb, where Arthur Nevin also lived. Nevin was a frequent visitor at the home of the Deans.

Ex-Husband Is Pleased.

Dr. Dean when seen this evening said:

"So Mazie and Arthur are to be married? Well, that don't surprise me and I hope they will be happy. They have known each other a long time. He was a frequent visitor to my home when Mrs. Dean and I were happy in it ourselves. She frequently told me that the "artistic temperament" of Nevin appealed to her. I liked him once and I'm glad of it."

Nevin appeared last night in the chamber of commerce banquet book between President McCrea of the Pennsylvania railroad and United States Senator Knox. He is 36 years old and devoted many years to his musical education, partly in the New England Conservatory of Music, in Boston, and partly under the German masters in Berlin.

Writes an Indian Opera.

His last and greatest work is the Indian grand opera, "Poia." This he completed in 1906 after three years of earnest work in its composition and orchestration.

In preparation for this task Nevin accompanied Mr. Walter McClintock in 1903 and 1904 to the Blackfeet Indian reservation in Montana and shared his Indian lodge at the time of the annual festival of the sun dance. He there received his inspiration and stimulus from the romantic life, the weird songs and dances, and the picturesque surroundings of an Indian camp.

THREE MORE AIDS PICKED BY BUSSE

Hanberg for Public Works, Brundage for Corporation Counsel, Mullaney for Private Secretary.

SHIPPY PROBABLY CHIEF.

Jury of Physicians Will Be Permitted to Choose Head of City Health Department.

Commissioner of Public Works—JOHN J. HANBERG.

Corporation Counsel—EDWARD J. BRUNDAGE.

Mayor's Private Secretary—B. J. MULLANEY.

The foregoing appointments by Mayor-elect Busse were decided on yesterday. In addition, Walter H. Wilson, who already has been announced as Mr. Busse's choice for controller, formally accepted the nomination and went out to procure a bond of $2,500,000. Charles H. Wacker will be a member of the board of education, if he will accept the place.

Senator Daniel A. Campbell will be appointed postmaster to succeed Mr. Busse.

The appointment of chief of police is not officially settled, but it is entirely likely that Inspector George Shippy, under consideration from the first, will be chosen.

A new aspirant for this place is Charles Peters, chief deputy sheriff. A number of his friends on the northwest side urged that his long experience in the sheriff's office, to which was added his work in handling the special deputy sheriffs during the teamsters' strike, has qualified him for the place. It is not understood, however, the candidacy has been taken into serious consideration.

Hunt Asks for Reinstatement.

In the line of police appointments ex-Inspector Nicholas Hunt filed an application to be reinstated as inspector in the Hyde Park and Town of Lake district. It was a formidable document, headed with the name of John A. Spoor as president of the Union Transit company and signed by every packing firm of any prominence in the stockyards. The trouble with it, however, is that Hunt is not eligible under the civil service law to any appointment on the police force short of that of chief. He could not even be made a patrolman, as he is too old. He was a "hold-over" inspector when he was removed and that removal separated him from the force.

He cannot take an examination for inspector, because that is promotional and only captains are eligible. He might be made a "sixty day" inspector, providing there was a vacancy, but there is none now. One would have to be created and then there is an eligible list for the place.

Hanberg Likely to Accept.

Mr. Hanberg has not yet accepted the appointment of commissioner of public works, but it is understood he will. He has been disinclined to take up the work of this office, but it has been given added importance lately, and the last appropriation bill raised the pay from $6,000 to $10,000 a year in consequence. So far nobody but Mr. Hanberg has been considered for the position. He had a long talk with Mayor-Elect Busse and Mr. Busse told him plainly he wanted him for the place and considered it his duty to take it.

The selection of Mr. Brundage as corporation counsel, although forecast some days ago, was not confirmed until yesterday. This is a personal selection, Mr. Brundage and Mr. Busse being personal as well as political friends, and the mayor-elect having great confidence in the ability and energy of the president of the county board. Now that the new courthouse is nearly completed, Mr. Brundage considers his work as the head of the county board as being practically done and is anxious to get back into the practice of the law.

To Seek Physicians' Advice.

In the appointment of a health commissioner Mr. Busse announced the selection would be left to a jury of the best known physicians of Chicago, and whomever they decide on would get the place. In this connection Mayor-elect Busse said:

"I do not want to shirk any responsibility, and I will not do so at any time during my administration. I am going to ask the people to make this their administration as well as mine. Whenever I find a competent man for any particular work I am going to get him and make him responsible for his work. He will not be bothered by political influences.

"In regard to the appointment of a health commissioner, I am going to consult with a number of well known physicians, including such men as Dr. Robert B. Preble, Nicholas Senn, John B. Murphy, Frank Billings, and A. C. Cotton. Whom they recommend will be named if he will take the place. It makes no difference whether he is a republican or a democrat.

"I recognize that in this appointment I am not competent to decide, and I want the advice of the leading physicians of the city, so that in case of an epidemic the profession will recognize the health commissioner as their appointment and coöperate with him in stamping it out rather than criticising the methods of some man in whom they have no confidence."

School Trustees "Must Behave."

It was given out semi-officially that the mayor-elect would stand for no "baiting" of Supt. Cooley by the radical members of the school board. Any attempt to interfere with Mr. Cooley's work for purely factious or political reasons would be regarded as good cause for removal from the board, no matter whether the term of the offending member has expired or not.

Under the law the mayor can remove a member for cause and the making of trouble in the schools by unwarranted attacks on the superintendent and uncalled for interference with the work will be regarded as sufficient cause.

Mr. Busse and Governor Confer.

Mr. Busse and Gov. Deneen held a conference for half an hour in Mr. Busse's private office at the postoffice. It was the first time Mr. Busse had visited the postoffice since he came back to Chicago suffering from the injuries that he received in the Pennsylvania wreck.

Mr. Busse said that he and the governor had talked principally on Chicago's new charter, which the governor promised to push along all he could. Mr. Busse thanked the governor appreciatively for the support given him in his mayoralty campaign.

"I realize fully," said Mr. Busse, "that your support and your personal efforts had a great influence in electing the republican ticket and indorsing the traction ordinances."

He also thanked the governor for his letter of congratulation, following a telegraphic message to the same effect.

"I hope your administration will be as successful as the notable campaign just closed," replied Gov. Deneen.

Interested in New Charter.

Arrangements were made at the conference for Mr. Busse and some of the more prominent members of the city council to go to Springfield in the interest of Chicago's new charter.

After the governor had departed Mr. Busse said:

"We talked a good deal about the new city charter. The governor said he was not familiar with all its provisions. Neither was I, so we agreed, in the near future, to read it over carefully and then some of the aldermen and prominent citizens and myself will go down to Springfield to push it through. Gov. Deneen promised to do all that he could in the interest of the bill.

"We did not discuss politics or the postmastership. I took occasion to thank him for his support and personal efforts in my behalf during the campaign.

"Senator Campbell came in after the governor had gone, but his visit of course had no significance. Everybody knows that he is as intimate a friend as I have in Chicago."

About all that the mayor elect would say about the postoffice appointment was that the new postmaster could not assume office for over a week, and on that account Mr. Busse would be more or less busy with the affairs of his federal position. He explained that the new postmaster, after he has received his commission, will have to send his bond down to Washington for approval and this will take several days.

Complaints Against Collins.

Mr. Busse was asked if he had paid any attention to the charges made against Chief Collins which might warrant the civil service commission from separating Collins from the police department.

One of the charges that has been substantiated is that the chief, after sending out a general order to policemen to find out how many Dunne posters were up in certain districts, had sent telephone messages privately to the police stations to tear the orders out of the record books and burn 'em up.

"I don't know from my personal knowledge," said Mr. Busse, "that Chief Collins issued any orders to that effect. I have been getting many letters from police officers and patrolmen making charges against Collins, and as fast as I get them I tear them up.

"I don't know just what the civil service is doing about Collins or any of the other police officers, but it would be bad taste for me to furnish the board with any evidence, and I don't propose to do it.

"I know just about how much these letters that I receive from members of the police department after election are worth, and I'd be obliged to people if they wouldn't send them."

Wants Co-operation of Public.

Mr. Busse wouldn't discuss his appointments any further. He said that he would expect the coöperation of the public in his administration, and if he got that there would be no reason for any complaints.

As to the appointment of the Rev. J. S. Stone as a member of the board of education, Mr. Busse said he had not heard it discussed. He said he had received a number of letters urging the appointment of different representative citizens for the school board or for other offices, but he could not recall that there had been the names of any clergymen among them. He was not ready to make public the names suggested in the communications.

The first and only official act of Mr. Busse during his visit to the postoffice was to appoint Gustav Schack, 914 Hancock avenue, as a temporary mail handler. It has been as difficult to obtain temporary clerks in the office as it has been for the United States civil service commissioners to obtain eligibles for regular appointments.

Campbell's Appointment Certain.

The choice of Senator Daniel Campbell for postmaster to succeed Mr. Busse became certain during the day. Senator Campbell had been the only man named for the position since James Pease, ex-sheriff, had decided not to accept the place. Mr. Pease's reason was that his health was not sufficiently robust to warrant him in undertaking new responsibilities.

Senators Cullom and Hopkins had no trouble in arriving at a decision to recommend Mr. Campbell to the president. The next postmaster is an intimate friend of the retiring one and was active in the campaign for his election as mayor.

Senator Campbell May Not Resign.

Friends of Senator Campbell said he would not resign his office as state senator before the adjournment of the general assembly, about the middle of May. The arguments that applied to State Senator W. E. Trautmann, who was made a federal district attorney while still holding the state office, are believed by some to apply with equal force to Mr. Campbell.

Attorney General W. H. Stead has held, it is asserted, that Mr. Campbell does not need to resign his state office. This opinion is based on the rulings of the Supreme court in Michigan and Kansas. The constitutions of those states are modeled after the Illinois constitution, and the highest court has held that when a state officer is appointed during his term of office to a federal office he doesn't need to resign his state office before the expiration of his term.

OFFICIAL CANVASS ENDS; VOTE SEES LITTLE CHANGE.

Recount Shows Loss of 78 for Busse and Gain of 115 for Dunne Over City.

The official canvass of the vote of last Tuesday was completed last night by the election commissioners. Chief Clerk Isaac Powell stated that the totals probably will be computed today in time to file with the county clerk.

As near as could be computed by comparison with police reports (which vary slightly owing to errors in transmission and of which the election commissioners take no official cognizance) Mr. Busse lost 78 votes in the thirty-five wards of the city in the canvass, while Mayor Dunne gained 115 votes. Koop apparently lost 86 votes. Brubaker gained 41 votes. It appeared that the traction ordinances gained about 300 votes.

The recount in the Fourteenth ward showed that Ald. Harkin was beaten for reëlection by James H. Lawley by only 38 votes. The police report said that Harkin was beaten by 127 votes. Representatives of both candidates watched the recount of the ward. They left without making any comment.

BRIDE OF 4 MONTHS DIES; SUICIDE BY CARBOLIC ACID.

Bertha Travis, Who Swallowed Poison Two Weeks Ago, Succumbs—Boy Shoots Himself in Mother's Presence.

Bertha Travis, 18 years old, a bride of four months, died yesterday in the county hospital from the effects of carbolic acid swallowed with suicidal intent more than two weeks previously.

The young woman lived with her husband, who is only 24 years old, at 539 West Thirteenth street. Suspecting her husband was untrue to her, she resolved to take her life. On March 18 she procured some carbolic acid and drank it while alone at home. On her husband's return he found his wife unconscious and summoned the police, who removed her to the county hospital. Since that time she has been fighting a losing battle against death.

Horace Citrone, 19 years old, living with his parents at 415 Jefferson street, made a determined attempt to commit suicide, with the same motive of disappointed love behind the act. Citrone left his home at 6:15 in the morning, presumably to go to work. Two hours later he returned, and after kissing his mother good-by shot himself close to the heart. There are slight hopes for his recovery.

Louis Kolb, 40 years old, 178 Erie street, committed suicide in his bedroom early in the morning by shooting. Ill health was the cause.

TRACTION RELIEF TO BEGIN MONDAY.

MITTEN HERE TOMORROW

President of City Railway Expected to Return with Acceptance of Laws.

The actual work of reconstructing the Chicago City railway lines probably will begin on Monday. Drawings and plans for the first work—that of replacing all tracks—have been completed by a force of men working under Bion J. Arnold, the city's chief engineer, and all that remains is the acceptances of the ordinances by the railway officials.

President Mitten is now in New York arranging for future contracts. He will return to Chicago tomorrow and it is expected that he will have the authority to accept the traction ordinances on behalf of his company. The city still will have thirty days to consider the ordinances before accepting them, but it is generally understood that action is what the the new administration is after and that this right will be waived and orders immediately given for carrying on the work begun.

Arnold's Work Saves Much.

Much of the work that has been done by Mr. Arnold has been done upon his own authority. It will save at least a month's time in the work of rehabilitation when it begins officially.

"In case my work is not approved I suppose that I can afford to lose it," said Mr. Arnold. "This work is relating, to a great extent, to the style of rails to be used and the manner of construction of the tracks. Of course it will have to be approved by the railroad officials."

The new rails are to be of the heavy flat type, which will give the maximum of speed with the minimum of power. Although the plans for reconstruction cannot be definitely settled upon until Engineer Arnold's two assistants are named, it is expected that the work will be carried on at different points, the places which are in the worst condition being selected first and the work pushed as rapidly as possible.

A meeting of the board of directors of the Chicago City railway company will be called by President Mitten on Monday. At this meeting the acceptance of the ordinances will not be the only important work done, it is expected. The selection of the engineer to represent the traction company will probably be taken up at this meeting.

Busse Seeks an Engineer.

Meanwhile, it is understood that Mayor-elect Busse is wrestling with the question of appointing the city's engineer. Mr. Busse is using the same cars in selecting this important personage as in all of the other departments, and will not name the man until it has been proved that he is the best obtainable for the place. The main requisite in making this selection is to get a man who will be above any outside influences and who will be big enough to cope with the corporation heads to be "handled."

Fisher Yet Undecided.

Walter L. Fisher said that he had not yet decided whether he would accept the offer of the city to remain in the office of chief traction counsel. It is known that the position will not pay Mr. Fisher as much as his private practice, and this is the one consideration that has caused him to hesitate about taking up the work for four years more.

"It is just a question of whether I can afford to remain in the position," said Mr. Fisher. "I do not know what I shall do, although I feel disposed to remain in the work."

Engineer Arnold insisted that the loss of Mr. Fisher would be keenly felt and that he should be retained at any cost.

PLANS TO FINANCE TRACTION.

Big Bond Issue by City Railway Company to Be the First Step.

New York, April 5.—[Special.]—The New York interests which bought control of the Chicago City railway company and the Union Traction company are preparing to finance the two concerns.

According to a report current in the financial district today the City railway company expects to authorize a big bond issue, probably $50,000,000. There is to be issued to the stockholders $24,000,000 of bonds, bearing 5 per cent interest. The bonds will be given to the stockholders free and will capitalize the $21,000,000 of assets which the city agreed to be the value of the City Railway company's property. The other $3,000,000 of bonds will cover the $3,000,000 of money raised by the City Railway company on its notes to purchase new equipment. The City of Chicago has agreed to pay 5 per cent on the value of the railway company's assets and this will provide the necessary 5 per cent to pay the interest on the bonds.

It is estimated that $18,000,000 more of the $50,000,000 bonds authorized will be sold and the proceeds used to reconstruct and rehabilitate the property. The remainder of the bond issue is to be sold from time to time to meet new construction needs. The Morgan plans with reference to Union Traction are not so well matured. R. R. Govin and other New York representatives are expected to go to Chicago within a week on Union Traction matters.

HARKIN AFTER TICKET DEALERS

Proposes to Get Warrants for All Who Are Violating Ordinance He Caused to Be Passed.

A number of warrants may be issued today against theater managers and ticket brokers for violation of the Harkin anti-speculating ordinance, the amended section of which went into effect last Sunday.

Ald. Harkin, although defeated for reëlection, is determined that the ordinance he succeeded in having passed shall be enforced and yesterday he began gathering evidence upon which to base new complaints. Should the warrants be issued the complaints will be based upon the amended section, which limits the sale of tickets to the box office.

In addition to issuing warrants for the rearrest of the theater men and "brokers" arrested two weeks ago several new complaints will be made and warrants taken out for all persons who in any way have anything to do with the illegal sale of theater tickets.

LIFE SAVER WINS AT ORATORY.

Peter Jensen, Captain of Evanston Crew, Takes First Prize in Declamatory Contest.

Peter Jensen, 46 years old, captain of the life saving crew stationed at Evanston, won first prize in the George A. Foster declamatory contest held in Evanston academy last night. He recited "The Rescue of Lygia," from "Quo Vadis."

His opponent was Miss Helen P. Patten, 17 years old, daughter of Amos W. Patten, chaplain of Northwestern university. She recited "The Famine."

Capt. Jensen has been stationed at Evanston for the last year and has been taking preparatory work in that time. His greatest attention has been paid to the study of history.

SCHOOL REFORM AT WORK.

TRUSTEES GET BUSY NOW THAT ELECTION IS OVER.

Cut Down Expenses by Discharging Sixty Special Repair Men, Revoke Transfers, and Intrust Supt. Cooley with Board Business — President Ritter Says He May Look Into the Charges of Politics Among Teachers—Perkins Official Axman.

Sixty repair men employed by the board of education were summarily discharged yesterday——

——The election is over.

Dwight Heald Perkins, architect of the school board, made the discovery that "the condition of the repair and permanent improvement fund makes it imperative that sixty men be dropped from the repair force at the present time." The buildings and grounds committee agreed that the discovery was a valuable one and at once conferred upon Mr. Perkins the full authority of the official axman. The question of reducing the repair force of the school board was discussed several weeks ago and no conclusion was reached—— ——But that was before election.

Hyde Park Transfers Revoked.

The school management committee of the board of education revoked the transfers from the South Chicago High school to the Hyde Park High school granted to two children several weeks ago at the urgent solicitation of Committeeman Peter Foote of the democratic central committee——

——The election is over.

The same committee, which not long ago took upon its own shoulders the task of going down to Springfield and warring with the W. C. T. U. in the effort to induce the lawmakers to repeal the act which compels the school teachers to use a certain physiology which devotes twenty pages to the cause of temperance, voted to intrust Superintendent of Schools Cooley with the mission of converting the lawmakers. He was appointed a committee of one to go down to the state capital and explain to the lawmakers the position of the board in the matter. He is to inform them that the Chicago teachers are anxious to preach the gospel of temperance in the schools, but feel that the text book prepared by the W. C. T. U. does not serve the purpose as well as some other book might. This will be the first errand upon which Supt. Cooley has been dispatched since the Dunne trustees came into power. But—— ——the election is over.

More Honor to Cooley.

Dr. John Guerin renewed his fight to have the passing average for teachers taking the school entrance examinations reduced from 75 to 65 per cent. He declared the present system to be wholly unfair. But the committee decided to take no action in the matter until Supt. Cooley returns from his speech-making visit to Beatrice, Neb., in the belief that it would be ill advised to take drastic action in the absence of Mr. Cooley——

——The election is over.

President Ritter of the school board received a written complaint from a taxpayer against the action of the public school teachers in engaging in the recent mayoralty campaign. Mr. Ritter was put in possession of one of the circulars signed by Margaret Haley, the text of which appeared in THE TRIBUNE last week, and which was sent to federationists throughout the system calling upon them to tell their pupils about the Dunne massmeeting at the Auditorium and also to lend a hand in the work of addressing copies of the Home Defender, the temperance publication which contained a scurrilous attack upon Mr. Busse, to the registered voters.

President Ritter promised to take drastic action. He said he would investigate the matter thoroughly and if it could be shown that the circulars were distributed in the schools—as is charged—he would take steps to have the teachers brought to a realization of the fact that they must obey the rules of the school board——

——the election being over.

Sorry He Can't Act.

President Ritter was also given proof that the campaign document dealing with the school question which was distributed upon the elevated trains was an exact reproduction of an article by Louis F. Post which first appeared in his organ and later was reprinted in the Teachers' federation bulletin. But President Ritter said he would take no action in this matter, as there is no rule prohibiting teachers from campaigning in the elevated trains. He deplored the fact, however, that the teachers had taken any part in the campaign—— ——the election being now over.

The question of permitting Principal Rufus Hitch of the Parental school to purchase military uniforms for the pupils at the school was taken up by the committee, but it was decided that no action should be taken in Supt. Cooley's absence, and so the whole matter was left to him——

——the election being over.

Louis F. Post and Raymond Robins were not present at the meeting of the school committees, and it was the first time that Mr. Post has failed to respond to the roll call. Some said it was because—— ——the election is over.

FROST'S CONTEST UNDER WAY.

Evanston Chief of Police Begins Attack on Plurality of 25 Which Defeated Him.

Definite plans for a contest of the Evanston mayoralty election, won by Joseph E. Paden from Col. Alfred S. Frost by a plurality of twenty-five votes, were set on foot yesterday when a committee of three attorneys was chosen to handle the battle for Col. Frost.

The three men were representative of different interests that backed the army man's candidacy, James P. Grier, a republican of the Second ward; James Hibben, a democrat of the Fourth ward; and Malcolm Harper, a prohibitionist of the Seventh ward. While the course of their legal action is mapped out its nature is kept secret, the only sign of its direction being the labors of several clerks who were engaged in making copies of the poll books.

Another direction the efforts of the committee will take is the raising of a fund of $1,000 for the expenses of the contest. C. A. Wightman and W. S. Mason, two real estate men of the suburb, have made subscriptions of $100 apiece.

LABORER CRUSHED TO DEATH.

Falling Crane at Deering Harvester Company's Plant Ends the Life of John Wydra.

John Wydra, 49 years old, 945 Clybourn avenue, was crushed to death yesterday by the falling of a crane at the plant of the Deering Harvester company, Clybourn and Wrightwood avenues, where he was employed as a laborer.

George Ertel, 60 years old, 2932 Cottage Grove avenue, a structural iron worker employed by Hansell Elcock company, Twenty-third place and Archer avenue, was almost instantly killed by a hoisting tackle which broke and fell fifty feet, striking him on the head.

The body was taken to Buffum's undertaking rooms, 1722 Wabash avenue.

MOODY PUPILS WED IN AFRICA.

Romance Begun at the Bible Institute Culminates in Marriage at Kigaga.

A romance begun over a year ago in Chicago at the Moody Bible institute culminated in the marriage of H. Lawrence Haigh and Miss Rose Boehning at Kigaga, British East Africa, on Feb. 6. The announcement of the marriage was received on Thursday by relatives of Miss Boehning at Elgin, Ill., her former home. Mr. Haigh was born in Bradford, England. He and Miss Boehning became acquainted while they were students at the Moody institute preparing to enter the mission field. Last summer they left for Africa. COLLINS' METHODS PUT HIM IN PERIL

Civil Service Commission After Him and Grand Jury May Join Work.

HEAD OPERATOR CALLED.

B. E. Thompson Admits Telling Chief of Danger from the Merit Board.

The position of Chief of Police John M. Collins as a politician of devious methods in concealing evidence against himself is becoming more precarious in view of the inquiry by the civil service commission.

To add to the terrors of exposure, the chief is now awaiting the impaneling of the next Cook county grand jury, when it is expected that evidence will be given against him.

When the civil service commission learned yesterday that the first act of Chief Police Operator B. E. Thompson, on leaving the witness chair in the civil service rooms last Friday, was to go directly to Collins' office and tell Collins that the civil service commission was inquiring about the special police orders in respect to the Dunne posters, it was decided to ask Thompson about it. Accordingly, Thompson was summoned before the commissioners late in the afternoon. Commissioners Prentiss and Powell did most of the interrogating, which was of a persistent variety.

"You were called before this commission last Friday and asked about the special order record of the central station," said Commissioner Prentiss. "At that time you told us that you had nothing to do with the records."

"I was asked if I knew anything about the records and I said that they were not in my charge," responded Thompson.

Admits Telling Collins at Once.

"It has been called to the attention of the commission that, after retiring from the commission's room, you went immediately to the chief, and he sent out an order to remove certain pages from the special order book," continued Commissioner Prentiss.

"I did go to the chief," admitted Thompson. "I told him I had been before the commission in regard to some election orders. He went right back into his office. That is all I know about it."

"Why did you go at once to the chief's office?" was the next question.

"I thought he ought to know about it and that I'd report it to him," said Thompson, who looked uncomfortable. "I dropped off the elevator at the second floor and told him."

"Were you present when the leaves were removed from the special order book at central?"

"No, sir; I did not give the matter another thought," said Thompson.

"Then," said Commissioner Powell impressively, "you saw fit to make a report on something outside your jurisdiction? You felt it incumbent upon yourself to report on something you had absolutely nothing to do with?"

"Well," said Thompson, "it must have been because it was out of my line to be asked about such things that I told the chief about it."

"But you did find it incumbent upon yourself to tell the chief something that you knew nothing about?" insisted Commissioner Powell.

Thompson repeated his former reply, thus avoiding a direct answer.

"That will do," said the commissioner, and Thompson departed.

Rumors of Another General Order.

Collins spent the day trying to figure out ways to put more democrats into jobs from which it will be difficult for the incoming administration to oust them. Although it was reported currently that he is preparing another general order, the chief denied that such was the case. He does not care for too much publicity in connection with general orders.

Chief Collins refused to explain why he reinstated Patrolman Lawrence McElligott, who was suspended following the death of Achilles Méret, whom he assaulted. This reticence on the part of the chief came as a surprise since it established a precedent in varying the stock reply, "for the good of the service."

Chair warmers and incompetents generally are worrying over the coming change in administration. This is not lessened by the fact that Collins is expected to make all the trouble he can for his enemies before the change goes into effect.

It is predicted that Capt. P. D. O'Brien of the detective bureau may be transferred and that the post will go to Capt. John McWeeney or Capt. William P. Clancy.

SENDS 'GUM SHOE' SERGEANT TO SHELTER FROM STORM.

Chief Orders Prendergast to Fiftieth Street and Told to Attend to Business There and He May Stick.

Chief of Police Collins caused surprise last night when he ordered Sergeant Thomas Prendergast, known as the "disturber of the department," to report for desk duty at the Fiftieth street station at midnight. Prendergast long has been traveling out of the chief's office and is known as the most efficient "gum shoe" man in the service.

The order was issued early in the evening. Sergeant John Hoyne, because of his friendliness to Busse, was transferred to the Hinman street station, many miles from his home. Hoyne was only a few months ago sent to the Fiftieth street station. Patrol Sergeant Klafter was ordered to report for desk duty at the Fiftieth street station. Klafter was promoted to the sergeancy three weeks ago.

Pressure was brought to bear by Prendergast in a futile effort to gain a lieutenancy, but he was ineligible. He proved his efficiency at the time of the Lavin trial so far as the chief's prosecution went.

"Is there no chance of me winning more laurels, chief?" asked the "gum shoe" sergeant. "Have not I done my duty? You know how I raked the gutters in the Mulcahy and Lavin trials, causing both of them to quit."

"You will do well, Tom," spoke the chief, smiling, "if you are able to stick at Fiftieth street. It looks as if you might not even stop at the Hegewisch station when I am succeeded in office. Go out there and try to attend to your own business. You may weather the storm, but I will not make any promises."

PATROLMAN SUES MERIT BOARD

Asks the Superior Court to Order His Restoration to Rank of Detective Sergeant.

Patrolman Fred E. De Celle began action in the Superior court yesterday to compel the civil service commissioners to restore him to his former rank of detective sergeant. He sets forth that he passed an examination for the position of detective sergeant on Aug. 13, 1900, and was appointed to the position on Feb. 1, 1901, and assigned for duty at the detective bureau. He was reduced in rank Oct. 11, 1903, on the report of Lieuts. Andrew Rohan and John McWeeney, who declared he was "useless and inefficient."

De Celle gives as his grounds for having the writ of mandamus issued that he was denied the right of having an attorney and insists that the commission had no legal right to reduce him in rank.

PLANS TO REDEEM CHICAGO.

ALD. BENNETT OUTLINES WORK OF NEW CITY COUNCIL.

Municipal Building to Be Torn Down and Foundation Laid for Modern Structure—Water Supply to Be Increased, Streets Will Be Kept Clean, More Police and Fire Stations to Be Built—Co-operation of Mayor Busse a Certainty.

Chairman Frank I. Bennett of the council finance committee outlined yesterday the improvements needed in Chicago which will be handled by the council when it has been reorganized and Fred A. Busse has taken office as mayor.

Ald. Bennett said the council can count on Mr. Busse's support in increasing its efficiency and that it faces an opportunity to make a glowing record for itself.

"With the traction question out of the way and no tangled theories to handicap it," he added, "the council must reorganize and maintain its committees in such a way that it may intelligently and efficiently assume its proper position in the government of Chicago.

"Among the big things for Chicago's betterment now on our list are the new city hall and the water department work. We have made an appropriation for tearing down the present city building and putting in a foundation for the new hall; but that is only a starter. All the work of drawing plans and financing the new structure remains to be done. And we want to do it efficiently.

To Increase Water Supply.

"The work in the water department is exceptionally heavy. We made plans a year ago and they now are well under way for the enlargement of the big tunnel in the southwestern part of the city.

"We've got to push this through at once to relieve the water famine in Hyde Park, Pullman, and West Pullman. We intend to increase the size of the big feeder mains on the north, west, and south sides. This will increase the pressure everywhere. Also we must hurry up the enlargement of the Lake View station.

"A number of new bridges must be built. We also must see to it that the repair work on the sewer system is done promptly and well. The police department has been enlarged and new stations for the police as well as for the firemen must be put up under the eye of the council.

Streets Will Be Kept Clean.

"With the aid of Mr. Busse, the just reproach against Chicago's streets may be removed. We have managed to increase the street cleaning appropriation and we want things to go so that we can increase it again.

"The aldermen will have some constructive work to watch in the rearrangement of the garbage collection work. New horses and equipment must be purchased under the decision of the city to do the work itself.

"Of course we are counting on the effective coöperation of Mr. Busse, but the responsibility is in large measure ours, and we must work to fit ourselves to handle it."

Mayor Dunne had little news to give out. He stated humorously that there were no further resignations to report up to date, and went home early.

CATHERINE M'CULLOCH, J. P., GUEST AT LAW CLUB DINNER.

Evanston's Woman Magistrate Entertained by Lawyers at Auditorium—Tells of Her Campaign.

Justice of the Peace Catherine Waugh McCulloch of Evanston was the guest last night of the Law club of Chicago at a dinner at the Auditorium. Russell Whitman was toastmaster.

Robert J. Carey answered the toast, "The Married Bachelor," whom he described as being "the man who stays at home while the family is at the seashore and wanders around town and through the clubs with a faraway, determined look in his eye, parched lips, and a desire to be friendly with every one."

"The Old Bachelor" was described by Frank Hamlin, who said: "The old bachelor comes under three classes—some were born that way, some made that way, and others always will remain that way."

Mrs. McCulloch was greeted with applause when she arose to speak. She began by saying: "In felicitating the members of this club I will say I have been a bachelor at law for twenty-one years and can call you brothers-in-law without violating social ethics, and to the judges of our courts can say 'brother judge' without being in contempt thereof."

She told of her election as justice of the peace in Evanston, the first office of the kind to be held by any woman in Illinois, and said the credit was with the women and the men. "The men are to be credited," she said, "because they asked almost everyone in Evanston to run for the office, and finally told me to run, and I was elected without a smirch on my character or the promise of a solitary job. I gave the men yards of yellow ribbon with my name on it, and Evanston was alive with those yellow ribbons election day." She closed by saying:

"I hope now to see women in various public places. I hope to see a woman corporation counsel or a member of the drainage board or a master in chancery, and that the start made with my election will spread to the women of Chicago and that their yellow ribbons of battle be recognized by the voters."

Francis W. Walker, at the close of Justice McCulloch's address, arose and caused laughter by saying:

"May it please the court and 'Squire McCulloch, there are some wards in Chicago this year where that little yellow ribbon could not be worn with any degree of success."

Maj. E. B. Tolman, Col. James Hamilton Lewis, and Justice McCulloch were guests of honor at the banquet.

KEEPS SALOON OPEN; IS FINED.

Edward Proulx Fails to Close on Election Day and Is Arrested After Warning.

Edward Proulx of Lynch & Proulx, saloonkeepers at Van Buren and Halsted streets, was fined $30 by Municipal Judge Sadler at Desplaines street yesterday for keeping his saloon open election day. His barkeeper was warned to close up that morning and did not comply. Proulx then was arrested and taken to the Desplaines street station.

A. W. Gillett, general agent of the Citizens' league, expressed no surprise over the action of Corporation Counsel J. Hamilton Lewis in nonsuiting all the cases pending against saloonkeepers for selling liquor to minors. Mr. Gillett declared he would take the cases to State's Attorney Healy for action.

"I suspected that our work would be given a setback by Mr. Lewis, now that he is about to be removed from office," said Mr. Gillett. "Our cases were not irregular, as claimed by Mr. Lewis. They were started by the city through Prosecuting Attorney Howard S. Tayor. We were ready with our witnesses when Mr. Lewis sent word to drop the two cases."

INTERCHURCH DINNER MONDAY

500 Chicago Men Expected to Assist in Planning Campaign for Mission Activity.

Plans have been completed for the interchurch men's banquet at the Auditorium hotel next Monday evening. It is expected by the committee in charge of the arrangements that 500 Chicago men will attend. The purpose is to awaken an interest in mission work. The speakers will be J. Campbell White, general secretary of the Layman's Missionary Movement; C. C. Michener, general secretary of the Young People's Missionary Movement; F. H. Sheets, district secretary of the Foreign Missionary society of the Methodist Episcopal church; and Robert E. Speer, secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions.

LOTTERY TICKETS SOLD IN CHICAGO.

Distributing Point for Northwest of Honduras Concern Is in City.

SUBPOENAS ARE SERVED.

Federal Grand Jury at Mobile Investigating Ramifications of the Trade.

The government has started an investigation into the sale of Honduras National lottery tickets in this country. It has been discovered that Chicago is the distributing point for the northwest and that incidentally a flourishing business of this character has been conducted in the city as well. The inquiry into this alleged violation of the federal statutes is to be held in Alabama, and five Chicago men have been subpœnaed to appear before a grand jury at Mobile next Thursday.

The investigation here in Chicago was taken up on instructions from Washington. Several weeks ago a raid was made on an office maintained by Martin Oppenheim, 84 La Salle street, and a quantity of tickets in the Honduras and Saxony lotteries were confiscated. The federal authorities assert that Oppenheim is merely a subagent and they refer to James E. Moore, 1761 Magnolia avenue, as the real agent. Moore has been arrested and placed under $5,000 bond to appear before United States Commissioner Foote.

Chicago Men Subpœnaed.

The Chicago men subpœnaed before the grand jury at Mobile are Oppenheim, Nathan Jacobs, Isaac Rossmussen, A. Natkin, and William Lay. A subpœna has also been issued for Moore, but the deputy marshal could not find him yesterday. Each of these men subpœnaed, according to the federal authorities, is an agent working under the general directions of Moore, and similar agencies are declared to have been maintained in Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Cleveland, and Detroit.

The ramifications of the lottery business, which, although clearly a violation of the federal laws, is declared to have grown up in the country, cannot be estimated. Practically every city of any size in the country is said to have some place where these tickets have been disposed of each month. In most places the tickets have been placed in the hands of saloonkeepers or proprietors of news and cigar stands, while in some instances Pullman car porters are said to have acted as agents. Among the other cities which will send delegations before the Mobile grand jury are St. Louis, Kansas City, Dallas, Fort Worth, Cincinnati, Louisville, Galveston, New Orleans, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Richmond, Denver, and Salt Lake.

In Operation for Ten Years.

The Honduras lottery, a revival of the old Louisiana lottery, has been operated in the Central American republic since 1897, and as congress passed an act prohibiting the sending of lottery tickets through the mails or by express the pasteboard slips have been carried about the country to the various agents by traveling men. The amount of money taken in by these agencies scattered all over the country each month is said to be enormous. When questioned by secret service men Oppenheim is said to have admitted that he disposed of between $1,200 and $1,500 worth of tickets each month. The capital prize in the lottery is $100,000, but as this can only be won by a full ticket costing $4, whereas the ordinary purchaser rarely buys more than one-sixteenth of a ticket, costing 25 cents, a large sum is seldom realized by an individual. It is reported that several years ago the holder of one ticket won a $60,000 prize and one of the agents examined by the government reported the payment of one for $7,500.

PLANK SAVES ENGINEER'S LIFE.

In Falling from Top of 200 Foot Chimney He Catches Scaffolding and Holds Fast.

John Nagel, a constructing engineer, fell from the top of a 200 foot chimney at the Standard Steel Car works in Hammond yesterday, but in his fall he struck a projecting scaffold on the outside about twenty-five feet from the top, which enable him to grasp a plank, thus saving his life.

Nagel was in charge of the building of the giant smokestack and in order to see the progress he ascended to the top of the structure in a drop bucket. When the bucket neared the top the man in charge of the hoisting engine below failed to perceive Nagel's signal to stop and the engineer was thrown over the edge of the narrow aperture above.

His fall was viewed with horror by the hundreds of workmen on surrounding buildings, whose attention was drawn to the top of the towering chimney by Nagel's cries. He escaped practically unhurt, but the other men on the smokestack were so unnerved that they could not work for some time afterwards.

NO WRIT NEEDED FOR CONSTANTINE

Alleged Murderer of Chicago Woman Waives Extradition Warrant.

STICKS TO SUICIDE TALE.

Seems Relieved That Worldwide Chase Is Ended and Protests His Innocence.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

New York, April 5.—[Special.]—Frank J. Constantine, charged with the murder of Mrs. Arthur W. Gentry in Chicago on Jan. 4, 1906, who was arrested Tuesday night by Detective Sergeant Vachris of the Brooklyn police, took the final step today which will land him in Chicago jail for trial. Through his attorney, Martin T. Manton, Constantine announced that he would not make a fight against extradition, but will go along willingly with the Chicago officers. All he asked was "a square deal."

The prelimary steps toward removing the red tape which surrounds New York police activity were taken before Magistrate Edward F. Dooley this afternoon in the Adams street police station. Constantine, still in the rough sailor costume he wore when captured at the time of his escape to Italy on the Roma, appeared before the bar with a motley collection of street pickups and drunks.

Willing to Return to Chicago.

Assistant Chief of Police Schuettler of Chicago, who arrived in New York this morning, presented the evidence of the state of Illinois against Constantine. Magistrate Dooley then asked the prisoner:

"Are you the Frank J. Constantine named in this indictment for murder?"

"I am," answered the prisoner calmly.

"I cannot try you," said the justice, "but I remand you to jail without bond until the arrival of proper papers."

Constantine said nothing, but Attorney Manton spoke up:

"We are going to plead not guilty to the charge, and are willing to go back if we can be assured fair treatment," he said.

"You will get that," said Schuettler.

"We will not be ready to start before Monday," said Manton.

"We will agree to wait until then, as the requisition papers have not arrived," answered Schuettler, and with this the prisoner was led back to the pen.

Schuettler had not seen him before, and made no attempt to talk to the man whom he has hunted all over the world with unceasing vigil for the last fifteen months.

It was explained that Detective Sergeant John J. Sheehan would bring the requisition papers from Albany when he arrived late in the afternoon, but he brought word that nothing could be done in Albany for a day or two. Schuettler expects to start west next Monday.

Chicago Witnesses Not Needed.

Martin Casey, the elevator man in the apartment building at 578 La Salle avenue, where the Gentrys lived at the time of the murder, came with Sheehan, but his presence is not needed now. The only step that will have to be taken before the departure of the prisoner is the sanction of a Supreme court justice to the signature of Gov. Hughes on the requisition. This is a mere formality.

In the various statements that Constantine made during the day he did not vary one jot from his original "confession" that he was in the house when Mrs. Gentry cut her throat, and that it was her blood that was found upon his overcoat when the police recovered the garment later.

Pale, but stolid and stubborn, Constantine refused to be badgered into answering a fire of cross questions played upon him. He appeared to bear an air of singular relief at finding himself in the toils at last.

"My mother spent $5,000 in keeping me in traveling expenses," he said. "I don't care how what does happen."

Sticks to Suicide Story.

"What reason do you have for expecting us to believe that Mrs. Gentry committed suicide in her street costume before your eyes?" he was asked.

"Well, I would not like to say. I do not think she was happy."

"You intimated that there was trouble between her and Scott. What was it?"

"I only know the conversations I heard between them through the walls of my room."

"How did she cut herself?"

"And you could not prevent it?"

"No, I was frightened and I knew I would be accused of the crime."

Other questions were asked and answered in the same way as in the original statement made to Capt. McCauley.

Constantine looked little like the dapper young Italian of mysterious noble blood who paraded Chicago's streets arrayed in a silk hat and finery. He wore the sweater that he found useful when working before the mast on the St. Paul during his last trip to this country. His face was unshaven and his clothing coarse and soiled.

He has rehearsed his story well during his long wanderings, and the police admit it is plausible and may be hard to break.

Betrayed by a Friend.

The only time he betrayed agitation was when questioned as to how he had been caught. Then he clenched his fists, and the fiery temper for which he was noted gleamed in his dark eyes. "I know who did it," he said, with an underlying meaning that bodes ill for his betrayer.

That Constantine was betrayed by a friend for the $500 reward offered is known. Detective Vachris, who is at the head of a special squad of young Italian police, who are assigned to ferret out the many mysterious "Black Hand" murders that crop out in the hotbed of Italian cliques, worked hard on the case and laid many lines. He admits that he received information that Constantine was to be taken care of by a friend of his, a petty officer on board the Roma, but he does not tell the rest of the story.

Vachris claims that he watched the ship in its comings and goings for months. The real truth of the capture is in the fact that Constantine's friends proved false to him. Vachris knew exactly where to find his man. He lay in wait Tuesday night in the shadow of the India wharf, a block and a half from pier 33, where the Roma lay.

A cab came along and stopped in front of the warehouse. Vachris stepped out and grabbed the man and the cab drove off.

The man who "tipped" the thing off is known, and it is feared that his own death may be the result. The police of Brooklyn do not laugh when the "Black Hand" is mentioned.

Shows Nerve When Taken.

Constantine showed remarkable nerve when Vachris laid hands on him.

"I want you, Constantine," said the detective.

"Me no u' stand," said Constantine in excellent broken English. He kept this game up until the next day, steadfastly refusing to admit identity, even when his old friend, Jacob Stein, now a tobacconist's clerk on upper Broadway, came to the jail. They had roomed together, played checkers together, and belonged to the same branch of the Y. M. C. A.

"So you don't know me?" said Stein at last. Well, good-bye, Frank," and he picked up his coat and walked out.

"The game's up," said Constantine a few minutes later, coming out of a brown study. "I am the man."

"Constantine is a remarkably clever man," said Schuettler tonight. "I do not believe he ever will confess the murder. We have a lot of work to do and may have to send to London for certain proof. I would not like to assert now that I am sure we will be able to refute his story. It is the most plausible thing he could have told. He admits only what he could not disprove.

Schuettler Sees Hard Task.

"There are several things in his statement that do not appear to be true. He says he gave his overcoat away after he left the Field store. He gave it away on the north side. He says the woman cut her throat from left to right. It was the other way, and the razor was nicked in a way she never could have done. He claims she was dressed for the street when he saw her last.

"I have three theories in regard to the case. He killed the woman in an insane rage because she spurned his attentions or because of sudden anger over financial difficulties into which he had plunged her and over which she chided him, or he tried to rob her. Mr. Gentry never could tell whether any of his wife's diamonds were missing or not. She had several when killed.

"From the character of the woman I cannot believe she committed suicide. She was a good woman, accomplished, and had a happy home. I expect a hard fight and will begin at once."

Schuettler and Sheehan will start working up the evidence in the case tomorrow.

Clever Plan Goes Wrong.

One of the most interesting things about the capture, aside from the strange story of Constantine's wanderings from New York to Italy, Brazil, Argentine republic, back to Italy, and then to New York again, is the story of the identity of the dead boy that the fugitive adopted. When he returned to New York, lured by that strange attraction that draws criminals back to the neighborhood of their crimes, he carried a baptismal certificate showing that he was Pasquale Gelorma, who was born in the province of Salerno, Italy, twenty-three years ago. Other papers showed that his father was Paulo Gelorma of 322 East One Hundred and Thirteenth street, New York.

These papers had been sent to the fugitive by his devoted old mother, soon after he left New York last March. They had been arranged with the real Gelorma, whose son Pasquale died many years ago. Frank J. Constantine was dead and Pasquale Gelorma had been born again. The man in One Hundred and Thirteenth street admitted it. Mrs. Constantine, who runs a small grocey in New Rochelle, said her son Frank was dead.

Love of Adventure Fatal.

All might have gone well had Constantine staid in the rural districts of Italy and Naples. However, it was all uncovered by Schuettler, who learned that Constantine had been hidden in the house of Charles Sophia, 1221 Intervale street, the Bronx, since Jan. 27. He remained in the house all the time. It was his craving for fresh air and action that led his mother to plan to send him again to Italy. She intended to follow after disposing of her store. But these plans went awry. The last act will come in Chicago. Constantine has been reported to be in love with a sister of Stein, the man who identified him, but the police say this is wrong, as the girl is only 13 years old.

NEED DR. DOHERTY AS WITNESS

Police May Try to Bring Army Surgeon from Manila for Constantine Murder Trial.

For the purpose of refuting the suicide tale told by Frank J. Constantine the Chicago police may decide to bring Dr. David J. Doherty to Chicago as a witness in the trial of the man charged with Mrs. Gentry's murder.

Police officials said yesterday that it may become absolutely necessary to the prosecution to have the physician's evidence. Dr. Doherty is the only person who heard Mrs. Gentry's dying statement as she fell to the floor at his feet, her hands clasped over the gash in her throat.

Dr. Doherty is a United States army surgeon, now stationed in the second reserve hospital at Manila, P. I., where he went shortly after the time of the murder. He had an office on the floor below the apartments occupied by the Gentrys, at 582 La Salle avenue, and it was in his office that the slain woman died.

In the police records the woman's dying statement, as given by Dr. Doherty, is, "Some one—cut—my—throat—with—a—razor." The police admit they are considerably worried over Constantine's story that Mrs. Gentry committed suicide.

William Luthhart, secretary in the detective bureau, said the trial of Constantine may hinge upon the exact language used by the dying woman, and much will depend upon whether Mrs. Gentry said "Some one cut my throat with a razor" or "He cut my throat with a razor."

Chief Collins in the evening received the following telegram from Assistant Chief Schuettler in Brooklyn:

"Frank J. Constantine just held by court to await extradition papers. Have fair statement."

MADE SANE BY CYCLONE?

PATIENTS AT JACKSON, LA., SAID TO HAVE BEEN CURED BY SHOCK.

Heavy Wind Storm Which Proves Blessing to Sufferers Is Disaster to Others, However, as Many Are Killed and Large Parts of Several Towns in Three States Destroyed—Three Hundred Mile Strip Affected by Tornado.

New Orleans, La., April 5.—A terrific cyclone which swept over three gulf states today, killing twenty persons and injuring fifty may have been a blessing to several patients at the state insane asylum at Jackson, La., the shock having restored them to what their physicians declare may prove permanent recovery.

Gov. Blanchard has rushed tents and cots from the state military supplies for the temporary housing of the asylum inmates. The governor issued a statement that the damage to the asylum is not above $100,000. Four women patients were killed.

Damage May Exceed $500,000.

The tornado moved from west to east, crossing the southern extremities of Louisiana and Mississippi and striking into Alabama for a short distance. Portions of four towns were devastated and damage probably exceeding $500,000 was done.

The tornado began at Alexandria, La., soon after 1 o'clock this morning, instantly killing four persons there, probably fatally injuring three, and seriously injuring thirteen others. Soon after daylight it neared the Mississippi river, instantly killing five persons at Jackson, La., while at Bayou Sara, La., at least half a dozen others are reported killed.

Last Reported at Selma.

The tornado next appeared at Carson, Miss., where great property damage was done, and the last heard of it was about noon, near Selma, Ala., where the inhabitants saw whirling clouds rise into the air as they crossed the river. One death, a negro, was reported near Selma.

Alexandria, a town of about 16,000 inhabitants, had a fearful experience. Scores of homes were completely wiped out, fifty were damaged, and altogether about 100 buildings were seriously wrecked, including several business houses.

KILLS HIMSELF AS LAWYER FINISHES DRAWING HIS WILL.

Percy T. Wells, Dying of Consumption, Dashes Head Against Wall When About to Sign Document.

San Francisco, Cal., April 5.—Almost with his last breath Percy T. Wells, a civil engineer of Waltham, Mass., arose from his death bed at the Grand Central hotel this afternoon, just as he was about to sign his will, and dashed his head against the wall with such force that he died a few minutes later.

Wells was about 24 years of age and had been in Guatemala for two years, engaged in railroad work. He arrived in San Francisco on April 2, in the last stages of consumption. He became crazed with grief when told he could not live to reach his home and see his mother and sister before dying.

He sent for an attorney to draw up his will, and every effort was made by physicians to keep him alive until the document was prepared. A few minutes before it was ready Wells suddenly arose from his bed and hurled himself head foremost against the wall.

BOARD OF CONTROL UNLAWFUL.

Chief Supervising Authority in Hamilton County, O., Is Judicially Declared to Have No Right to Exist.

Cincinnati, O., April 5.—The board of control of Hamilton county, the supervising authority in all public affairs in this county, was declared to be without legal existence, being in contravention to the state constitution, in a decision announced by the Circuit court today.

The board has been in existence for twenty years, and the decision followed a suit by Franklin Alter as a taxpayer.

The ground for the decision is that the law creating the board was special legislation without such general application as is required by the state constitution, and its effect is to oust the board unless the Supreme court, to which an appeal may be taken, should reverse the lower court.

TRIPLE SHOOTING ENDS FAMILY ROW

Adam C. Rhein Tries to Kill Parents-in-Law and Then Takes Own Life.

WIFE ESCAPES HIS WRATH

Bullets Fly in Confectionery Shop of Old Couple, 261 Twenty-ninth Street.

After shooting his father-in-law and mother-in-law yesterday afternoon, Adam C. Rhein killed himself. Rhein's wife, Minnie, who is suing him for divorce and who was the chief object of his frenzy, escaped unharmed.

The shooting occurred at the home of Mrs. Rhein's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Rommel, 261 East Twenty-ninth street. Rommel, who is 67 years old, is in a serious condition, a bullet having passed through his right lung. Another is imbedded in his left wrist. Mrs. Rommel, who is 61 years old, has a bullet in her right shoulder and will recover.

Rhein, who was 50 years old and lived at 3725 Lowe avenue, shot himself in the head and died instantly.

An additional touch of tragedy is given the affair by Mrs. Rhein, who declares that her young son had told friends of his intention to kill her and her daughter, Hattie. She said she would place this boy in a home for incorrigibles where he was once before.

Married Twenty-two Years.

The Rheins have been married for nearly twenty-two years and had three children, Otto, 19 years old; Hattie, 17 years old; and William, 16. During recent years Mrs. Rhein says they have had constant strife and her husband has beaten her frequently. A week ago, following a disturbance, she filed an application for divorce, based on the grounds of cruelty.

The children, who are all employed, continued to reside with their father. Mrs. Rhein sought refuge with her parents at the little confectionery store in Twenty-ninth street. She ate her meals there and aided in the housework and attending the store. She slept at the Sisters of Mercy convent, Wabash avenue and Twenty-ninth street.

The husband was served with the summons in divorce on Thursday. That night he started drinking. Instead of reporting for work yesterday at the Keeley brewery, where he was employed, he dressed in his best clothes, procured two revolvers, shaved off his mustache, and then proceeded to find his wife.

Searching for Wife.

He made his first trip to the store about 12:30, and in a respectful manner inquired for his wife. Rommel and his wife were waiting upon school children, who crowded the little store. Rommel motioned to Mrs. Rhein, in the room directly back of the store, to remain where she was. Rhein became angered, but left without causing a disturbance.

An hour later he returned, and shouted:

"Where is Minnie? I must see her at once. You folks have interfered with my business long enough."

Mrs. Rommel remained behind the counter, but Rommel hastened to the rear of the house to help Mrs. Rhein escape. Mrs. Rhein ran out through the alley and hid behind a pillar of the South Side L road. She was found at this point in a faint, her apron covering her head, when the patrol wagon arrived fifteen minutes later.

Unable to find his wife, Rhein turned his attention to Rommel in the kitchen, and after shooting him twice ran into the store and shot Mrs. Rommel. He then ran towards the door with the apparent intention of escaping, but seeing neighbors approaching he suddenly placed the muzzle of the revolver in his right ear and fired. Death was instantaneous. A revolver, with four empty chambers, was found at his side, and another loaded revolver was taken from his coat pocket at the undertaking rooms of McNeil Bros., 2915 State street, where the body lies awaiting an inquest today.

Warning Comes Too Late.

One of the first callers at the place of the shooting was Mrs. Emma Haas, wife of Joseph Haas, who came, she said, to warm Mrs. Rhein that Rhein was searching for her and her father and mother, intent on killing them all. Rhein was at the Haas house, 6748 Lafayette street, shortly before noon, and inquired for his wife. He said she had no occasion to leave him. Rhein cried and became frantic and told Mrs. Haas she was lying when she said Mrs. Rhein was not there. Rhein searched the house and then, according to Mrs. Haas, said:

"Never mind, I'll find her and kill her and the old man and old woman. They put it into her head to sue me."

Mr. and Mrs. Rommel were taken to the Wesley hospital. Rommel was too weak to say anything, but Mrs. Rommel talked freely of the affair. She is the second wife of Rommel and corroborated her stepdaughter's story of abuse and of Rhein's repeated threats to kill the entire family.

"We had nothing to do with my daughter's leaving him," she said. "We had coaxed her to put up with him if she could, as we could not keep her. That little store barely supports us and our little grandson."

Unhappy for Eighteen Years.

"I cannot tell much of the shooting," Mrs. Rhein said. "I heard Adam's voice on his first visit. He asked: 'Where's Minnie,' and I was going to enter the store and talk with him when my father motioned for me to stay back. All I remember is that father said, 'Keep quiet, Adam.' As soon as father told me of the second visit I ran out. We have not had a single happy day in the last eighteen years. He was jealous, but had no cause."

SWIMMER SAVES CHICAGOANS FROM DROWNING IN NEVADA.

Prof. Hall and Three Students of University Rescued by One of Party After Boat of Explorers Capsizes.

Reno, Nev., April 5.—[Special.]—Prof. Ross G. Hall and three students named Kammerer, Cashel, and Brown of Chicago university, who have been on an archæological exploration near the end of the Truckee river and about Pyramid lake, had a perilous experience yesterday. While boating on the lake all would have been drowned but for the presence of mind of Brown, who is an excellent swimmer.

The boat in which the party was on a tour of inspection about the lake, capsized. Brown swam to the shore and securing a rope, made one end fast and then took the end to the helpless men hanging on to the overturned boat. Then they pulled themselves to the shore.

"We came to Nevada to inspect the much-heralded writings in stone that are supposed to have been made by the Aztecs in their wanderings in the north," said Prof. Hall today. "We had a narrow escape on the lake, and but for the bravery of Brown we would be dead today. As it was we lost part of our valuable relics."

The party left for home last night.

Robbers Hold Up Freight Train.

Buffalo, N. Y., April 5.—Three train robbers held up an east bound West Shore freight train a short distance east of Clarence, N. Y., last night, and while two of them held the conductor and engineer at the point of their revolvers the third broke open a car and threw out some packages of merchandise.

Commutes Boodlers' Sentences.

Jefferson City, Mo., April 5.—Gov. Folk today commuted the sentences of Emil Hartmann and Julius Lehmann, former members of the St. Louis house of delegates, convicted of boodling, to expire on June 15. They were sentenced in 1904, Hartmann for six years and Lehmann for seven.

Attorney Victim of Assault.

Logansport, Ind., April 5.—[Special.]—Warren W. Borders, a wealthy attorney of Winamac, was found unconscious in a remote part of Logansport tonight, suffering from brain contusions. He had apparently been assaulted, but not robbed. He is unable to talk and cannot explain his injuries.

BANKER LACKS $5,000 BAIL

G. F. SORROW HELD IN CUSTODY OF A DEPUTY.

Associate of Abner Smith Given Up by Bondsman, but Hopes to Furnish Required Surety Today—Stockholders of Wrecked Institution Tell of Statements Which Led Them to Invest—Paying Teller Says He Kept No Deposit in Institution.

Gustav F. Sorrow, reputed eighteen months ago to be one of the prosperous manufacturers of Chicago, and now on trial as an official of the defunct Bank of America, spent yesterday in Judge Pinckney's courtroom in the custody of a deputy sheriff. When court adjourned in the afternoon he admitted that a search of thirty-six hours had failed to discover in the city a friend or business associate who was willing to replace the $5,000 bond revoked by Sorrow's bondsman on Thursday.

After a hurried conference with the attorneys for Sorrow and for the state, Judge Pinckney announced that he would accept a cash bond of $5,000 on the two indictments on which the defendant is held. On the first of these a $4,000 bond has already been issued by a surety company. Sorrow accordingly telegraphed to friends in New York for the remaining $1,000, but was compelled to spend last night in the custody of the deputy, who took him to a hotel near the criminal court building.

Sorrow showed plainly the effect of the trying situation in which the unexpected defection of his bondsman has placed him. His face was drawn and careworn and his manner, usually cheerfully confident, was nervous and dejected.

Stockholders on Witness Stand.

Detailed accounts of the Bank of America's methods of promoting its business were given during the day by a score of witnesses, most of them stockholders.

Francis W. McIntosh, a dealer in paper at 179 Lake street, told the jury of a conversation with Jerome V. Pierce, cashier of the Bank of America, in regard to opening an account at the bank.

"I had to borrow money at times in the course of my business," said Mr. McIntosh, "and I wanted to get in where—well, where interest wouldn't be so high as it was at the bank where I had my deposit."

The witness said that, at the suggestion of Mr. Pierce, he had persuaded his wife to sell three shares of National Biscuit company stock which she held and purchase two shares in the Bank of America with the proceeds.

"Pierce told me," he said, "that the Bank of America stock would pay 20 per cent. He said that the average state banks paid about that. He said that the stock might not pay quite as much as that the first year, on account of the expense of opening the bank, but that in any case it would pay more than the National Biscuit stock.

"I paid for the stock and left it at the bank as security for further loans."

Reference to the certificate stubs of the bank showed that the two shares bought "at Pierce's advice" had been originally the property of the cashier.

Teller's Savings Kept Elsewhere.

W. M. Conover, who was employed as paying teller at the bank, was asked by Assistant State's Attorney Young if he had any deposits at the bank.

"No," he replied.

"You were on the inside, were you?" suggested Mr. Young.

"Yes, sir," said Conover, calmly.

The jury grinned broadly, and Charles G. Neely of counsel for the defense moved hastily that the question and answer be stricken out.

Harry Wolf, an employé of a wholesale clothing firm, testified in the morning that F. Sidney Badger, a brother-in-law of Sorrow, had persuaded him to subscribe for twenty shares of Bank of America stock by telling that the stock had already been oversubscribed "about 25 or 50 per cent."

"I asked him," said Wolf, "why they wanted my subscription if the stock was oversubscribed. He said they were anxious to secure good names and—well, he said the more the better."

Boy Hunter Wounded; Kills Himself.

Muskegon, Mich., April 5.—[Special.]—Sixteen year old Otis Stone of Newaygo county, while hunting this afternoon, accidentally shot himself in the ankle, tearing away the bone so that he would be crippled for life. While his companions hastened for assistance he put a bullet through his brain, welcoming death rather than a cripple's existence.

GUILTY IN AUTO TRAGEDY

COLLIER CONVICTED OF MANSLAUGHTER AT KENOSHA.

Chauffeur Convicted in Connection with Death of William Dreyer, Who Was Killed by Automobile in Wisconsin City—Defendant's Attorneys Will Take Case to Supreme Court if Motion for New Trial Is Overruled by Judge.

Kenosha, Wis., April 5.—[Special.]—Edward Collier, chauffeur for the Thomas B. Jeffery company in this city, who was tried for the death of William Dreyer, who was killed by an automobile last July, was found guilty of manslaughter in the fourth degree by a jury in the Circuit court here this afternoon. The verdict was reached after the jury had considered the evidence in the case for nearly two days, and it came as a great surprise to Collier's friends, who had expected a disagreement.

The attorneys for Collier at once moved the sentence be suspended and that a new trial be granted. The motion was taken under advisement and it is possible that a decision will be rendered tomorrow.

Vain Hope in Deadlock.

The defendant and his friends had been led to believe from the long consideration on the part of the jury that the verdict would be one of disagreement. It was known that during the long deadlock the jury had stood for many hours nine for conviction and three for acquittal and Collier's friends believed that the men who favored acquittal would hang out to the bitter end.

Just after noon today the jury came into court to ask for further instructions and at that time the foreman stated that the jury was hung on account of a lack of evidence. The court took up all the instructions that had been given to the jury and reread them, adding instructions which would aid the jury in reaching a verdict, which was returned in half an hour. The attorneys for the defense claim that the last instructions given by the court were prejudicial to the defendant.

May Appeal Case.

It is stated by the attorneys for the defense that Collier is determined to prove his innocence and that should the court refuse to grant a new trial the case will be taken to the Supreme court. While no sentence has been imposed on Collier, it is understood that the state will not ask for a sentence of imprisonment, but will be satisfied with a fine in the case.

Collier gave a new bond tonight on which Mayor James Gorman and Police and Fire Commissioner Robert Nicoll were the sureties.

SANITARIUM BURNING; THIRTY PATIENTS ARE IN DANGER.

South Windham, Conn., Institution Probably Will Be Destroyed—Building Was Formerly Summer Hotel.

Willimantic, Conn., April 5.—The Grand View sanitarium at South Windham, about three and a half miles below this city, is burning and probably will be destroyed. Thirty patients are said to be there at the present time. The building is a large one and was formerly a summer hotel.

MORMON'S DENY CRITICISMS.

Seventy-eighth Annual Conference Proclaims Loyalty to United States—$1,000,000 Debt Paid.

Salt Lake City, Utah, April 5.—The seventy-eighth annual conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints began here today in the Mormon tabernacle, representatives from Mormon colonies all over the world being present. President Joseph F. Smith made the announcement that the church had completely paid up its $1,000,000 bonded indebtedness.

A lengthy address to the world was adopted, setting forth the principles of Mormonism, protesting against criticism brought against the church, proclaiming loyalty to the United States, and declaring that the church has kept the pledge given when statehood for Utah was made possible on condition that polygamy be abandoned.

Apostle Reed Smoot was among the church dignitaries present.

CITY INTERESTS BRITISH ENVOY.

Ambassador Bryce Views Chicago from Roof of Railway Exchange Building.

BALKS AT AN INTERVIEW

Pleased with D. H. Burnham's Plans for Beautifying Streets and Boulevards.

A slender, elderly man with a white beard and keen eyes, who looked to be about 70 years old and may have weighed 125 pounds, received a good deal of attention in Chicago yesterday.

He is James Bryce, the new British ambassador to the United States. He was much interested in Chicago's plans for civic and esthetic development, he said. He asked reporters a good many questions about the city's foreign population.

Mr. Bryce and his wife, who arrived in the city in the morning, were driven to the residence of Franklin MacVeagh, 103 Lake Shore drive, where they will be entertained. Mr. Bryce will be the guest of the Commercial club in a general sense, speaking tonight on "The City and the State," at a dinner to be given by that organization at the Auditorium hotel.

He got some first hand information about the city in the afternoon, when he inspected in the office of Daniel H. Burnham the plans providing for a Chicago that will be esthetically and architecturally the peer of any city.

"Most interesting," commented the ambassador, as he inspected such details as his fast schedule would permit. "When these are carried out Chicago will be one of the most beautiful cities in the world."

Declines to Be Interviewed.

The ambassador and Mrs. Bryce came to Chicago in the private car of Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, president of the Canadian Pacific railroad, from Ottawa, Ont., where he had been the guest of Governor General Earl Grey.

He was met at the La Salle street station by Franklin MacVeagh and a party of members of the Commercial club, as well as by a number of newspaper reporters to whom he said that he never had been interviewed.

In England it is considered an impertinence to interview distinguished persons, and it is scarcely ever done. An enterprising reporter who might want to interview King Edward, for instance, even with the understanding that he would only quote him in the third person as "the highest authority," would find it hard to get past the sentry. Hence Mr. Bryce's distaste of that sort of thing. A number of photographers—his pet aversion—wanted to take his picture, and he said he'd "rawther not."

"Why, do you know," he said to Mr. MacVeagh, "that they'd knock on the window glass of the coach and ask me to stick me head out so they could take my picture? I simply wouldn't do it."

Sees Chicago from Skyscraper.

After luncheon the ambassador and Mr. MacVeagh, accompanied by President George E. Adams and Secretary Benjamin Carpenter of the Commercial club, drove to the office of Mr. Burnham in the Railway Exchange building. They were met there by John G. Shedd, Charles D. Norton, Cyrus McCormick, Marvin Hughitt, E. B. Butler, and several others of the Commercial club.

After the ambassador had looked over the plans for a Chicago that would have a great boulevard and outer driveway extending for several miles along the lake front, Mr. Burnham wanted him to look at Chicago from the roof of the big building, so he walked nimbly over to the elevator, escaping several newspaper reporters who wanted to ask him about politics and the next peace conference and his impressions of America.

He came back presently and said he'd talk to the newspaper men for a minute or two before going over to the concert at Orchestra hall, near by. One of the Commercial club members held his overcoat ready for him to slip into it.

After referring to the plans he had just inspected, the ambassador interviewed the reporters.

Interested in Immigrants.

"I am greatly interested in the immigration question in this country," he said. "What would you say now is the largest foreign element in Chicago? Where do they come from? How do you get them? Haven't you a good many Greeks and Italians here? Do the Greeks come from continental Greece or from Asia Minor or the islands?"

The ambassador was asking all these questions because Canada is having a hard time to get enough laborers to build railroads and for similar constructive work.

"I suppose the immigrants gravitate to the large cities," he said. "The Salvation army is bringing some into Canada. They are largely Swedes and Norwegians and make an excellent class of citizens. We are getting a good many Italians also."

Mr. Bryce said his impressions of Chicago had been gained from a quick ride through the downtown district and the Twenty-first ward and what he'd seen of it from the roof of the Railway Exchange building. He spoke well of the city.

After leaving Orchestra hall he was taken for an automobile drive by Charles D. Norton. The touring car took them to the Saddle and Cycle club on the north shore. Mr. MacVeagh gave a dinner party in the evening to the distinguished Englishman and to twenty guests. There will be a luncheon in his honor today at the Chicago club and tomorrow he and Mrs. Bryce will leave for Washington.

SHARPLY ASSAILS IROQUOIS DECISION

Law School Dean Criticises Ruling of Judge Kimbrough in Davis Case.

ALLEGES FLAW IN LOGIC.

Declares Methods of Criminal Practice Tainted with Antiquated Pedantry.

John H. Wigmore, dean of the Northwestern university law school, in the current number of the Illinois Law Review, a monthly law journal of which he is associate editor, strongly condemns the verdict of Judge Kimbrough in the Iroquois theater fire case and flays the modern methods of criminal practice and justice.

The article appears under the title, "The Iroquois Theater Case—Is Our Criminal Justice a Failure"? Mr. Wigmore attacks the process of reasoning which resulted in the opinion and verdict, and also the right and propriety of Judge Kimbrough, a judge of the lower court, to give a decision that made it impossible to carry the case to the Supreme court of the state for an interpretation of the law and the validity of the ordinances concerning protection of the theaters of Chicago from fire.

Quotes Part of Opinion.

Concerning Judge Kimbrough's decision that the theater ordinance is invalid because it applied only to a part of the city territory, Mr. Wigmore quotes the following part of the opinion which argues that a restriction of fire precautions to specified districts would be unfair and void:

"Can it be said that human life is less sacred on Randolph street, within the fire limits prescribed, than on Clay street, so to speak, without the fire limits. May 600 to 1,000 or 1,200 people who may live upon Clay street be incinerated and burned and the man in control of a building who has been guilty of precisely the same neglect, been guilty of precisely the same moral turpitude, be free from punishment or censure, and the other man be guilty of an offense that would imprison him in the penitentiary for the term of his natural life? Can this be the law of the state of Illinois? I cannot believe that it is. I know that it ought not to be the law that of two men doing precisely the same thing and guilty precisely of the same acts in the same city, in the same community, one should be a murderer in common acceptance and the other not guilty of even an offense worthy of a fine."

Assails Logic of Kimbrough.

Concerning this phase of the opinion Mr. Wigmore says: "Such is the sickly logic which is today expected to do duty to protect us against crime. Other men are morally, though not technically, as guilty as these men; therefore—what? The others should be punished also? Not at all; 'therefore these should escape also!' If ever logic deserved the reproach which tradition has heaped upon its professors in the scholastic ages, surely it does so here. This kind of logic binds our criminal law so tight that only miscreants can benefit by its importance. What we rather need is the sturdy moral rebuke which the Supreme court of Iowa recently administered to a similar logical trick tried by a violator of the law."

Bar to Further Proceedings.

Concerning the finding of a verdict the writer says:

"The decision is presumably a bar to further proceedings thereunder, because the judge ordered a verdict and refused a nolle prosequi. A single judge of the Fifth Circuit court assumed the power, by his single decision, to declare the law by which this whole terrible affair must be forever regulated. Yet has not our Supreme court been placed on high, coequal among the exalted powers of state, to do that thing? What a superannuated, one hoss shay of a system it is, which prevents the state, the protector of the helpless victims of crime, from appealing to the Supreme court to settle questions of law! This absurd state of affairs would not be doing its worst for us, as a system, if these judges were not still dominated by the English tradition and did not take themselves too seriously in criminal cases.

Attacks Judge Humphrey, Too.

"A judge who sits only in trial cases, the lowest in the triple hierarchy, need not and should not treat himself as a final arbiter of law. The constitution does not make him such. Yet that is what they are doing nowadays in the most important criminal cases. Last year it was District Judge Humphrey in the packing house cases in the federal court; now it is the Circuit judge in the Iroquois disaster.

"The constitution did not delegate it to the 'honest convictions' of a county judge to declare 'what the law of the land is,' but to the full bench of the Supreme court of the state. The county judge is welcome to his convictions; they are not the law. It is not a question of the county judge's conscience, but of the state's attorney's conscience. If the latter officer reasonably and conscientiously maintains a proposition of law which the defendant disputes, and a genuine issue is formed, it is not the duty of the county judge to attempt to settle that law; it is for him to rule so that the constitutional authority can settle it.

"Honest Convictions" Not Law.

"But his 'honest convictions'? He should not have such convictions; he should not let himself get that far. Before the point of doubt is passed in his mind, he should stop, and rule so as to let that doubt be settled later by the Supreme court.

"His convictions? Suppose the Supreme court had already decided the precise point in the contrary way—contrary to his convictions? Would those convictions count any longer? He may still have them if he pleases; he may have an 'honest conviction' that the supreme court had erred, but must he not follow the Supreme court and keep his 'honest convictions' out of the case? Of course he must. His oath is to apply the law of the Supreme court, which is the only law. It matters not whether the Supreme court has decided it yesterday or will decide it tomorrow; he is subordinate to them.

"It is this general lack of direct, modern, practical, working sense which is the depressing feature of our criminal procedure today. Such a crisis as the Iroquois disaster merely brings out the inherent, every day fault into a startling light. Can we never realize that all this is unnecessary and antiquely incompetent?

System of Antiquated Pedantry.

"'Fifty years ago'—thus wrote Lord Justice Bowen, one of England's greatest modern judges—'at a moment when the pecuniary enterprises of the kingdom were covering the world, when railways at home and steam upon the seas were creating everywhere new centers of industrial and commercial life, the common law courts of the realm seemed constantly occupied in the discussion of the merest legal conundrums, which bore no relation to the merits of any controversies except those of pedants, and in the direction of a machinery that belonged already to the past.'

"These words are still true of our criminal justice in this country. It is a system of antiquated pedantry, unfitted to do the work that is required of it.

Reform Methods Demanded.

"Our object here is to point out a striking example of that unfitness—to show what anarchy we shall soon arrive at unless something is done to remedy it—and to insist that a main fault lies in the spirit permeating our bench and bar at large in its handling of criminal justice; for the judges are merely graduated lawers, who continue the habits of thought already formed. The question is going to be whether the profession will undertake itself to regenerate the system, or whether it will wait for social indignation to intervene and wrest the problem forcibly and crudely from the hands of the profession.

"This is an old problem, recurring every so often in the centuries. Sometimes reform is undertaken in season, but sometimes revolution steps in too quickly. Justice tends, in cycles and in each community, to become clogged and rank."

One of Pittsburg's "Twenty-eight" Falls from Pedestal the Very Next Day.

ARTHUR NEVIN

The day after he had been held up to the world as one of Pittsburg's twenty-eight faultless men at the Chamber of Commerce's "Virtue banquet" it became known that Arthur Nevin, the composer, is to marry a divorcée whose separation from her husband was the subject of gossip.

PLAN TO OUST PREACHER.

SYNOD ORDERS HIM TO QUIT OLD CHARGE OR BE DISMISSED.

Dr. Henry Luz, for Thirty-two Years Pastor of St. John's Lutheran Church in Dubuque, Ia., Accused of Too Much Activity in Real Estate, of Selling Patent Medicine to Sick Members of Flock, and Dealing in Electric Appliances.

Dubuque, Ia., April 5.—[Special.]—Pastor Henry Luz, for thirty-two years in charge of the flock of St. John's German Lutheran congregation in Dubuque, has been given the alternative of resigning within four weeks or being summarily removed from the pastorate.

The ultimatum was delivered after the investigation of charges against him conducted by the president and vice president of the Iowa synod, a report of which was given out this morning. The findings were signed by E. H. Castleman, president of the synod, of Charles City, and the Rev. C. Prohl, vice president, of Mendota.

For five years there has been dissension in the church. On several previous occasions action has been taken by members of the flock to force the resignation of Pastor Luz, but invariably he has been able to muster enough support to block the efforts.

Charge Commercial Activity.

It was charged that he has been devoting his time, to the partial exclusion of pastoral duties, to real estate matters; that he has been an agent for patent medicines which he recommended on visiting sick members of his congregation; that he sold electric appliances charging the exorbitant price of $25 for each, and making the sales on the strength of his influence as pastor, and that he has broken his word.

Rancor among the church factions became so pronounced that Luz now has pending a suit for $15,000 damages against a member of the flock, alleging that the member called him a "spitzbube," which, in English, means rascal.

Synod Takes Decisive Action.

Matters reached a crisis when a secret meeting, attended by officers of the synod, was held last night in Dubuque, and a verdict given on testimony presented on Feb. 3 last to the effect that while the charges were substantiated they were insufficient in themselves to demand removal, but it was evident that the church was so badly split that effective work was no longer possible by the present pastor and he was ordered to resign or be removed.

It is said Luz has fixed himself comfortably financially by outside deals. If he resigns within the prescribed time he may secure another charge, but if he refuses he will be barred from all ministerial duties.

He has not announced what action he will take.

CHURCH DOUBTER IS DEPOSED.

The Rev. Gustavus Tuckerman of Boston Ousted from the Episcopal Priesthood.

Boston, Mass., April 5.—It was learned tonight that the Rev. Gustavus Tuckerman of this city and formerly of New York and St. Louis had been formally deposed from the priesthood of the Episcopal church by the Rt. Rev. Dr. David H. Greer, bishop coadjutor of New York, with which diocese the Rev. Mr. Tuckerman has been canonically connected.

Mr. Tuckerman's relations with the Episcopal church were severed because he could no longer accept the teaching of that communion regarding the doctrine of the Holy Trinity and the virgin birth, and he is now a minister of the Unitarian denomination.

Sentence of deposition was pronounced last Tuesday in New York by Bishop Greer.

OBITUARY.

MRS. LOVISA C. DYER, the last member of the pioneer family which, headed by Isreal Cheney, arrived in Chicago from New England seventy years ago, died at her home, 2312 Wabash avenue, yesterday, aged 85. Burial will take place at Beloit, Wis., where the other members of her father's family are buried.

MRS. EVA MOLITER, 68 years old, 2 Buena avenue, died at her residence late last night. Heart disease is believed to have been the cause of her death. Mrs. Moliter had been sitting in a chair in the parlor of her house and arose to walk toward her bedroom when she fell. When other members of the family reached her side she was dead.

THE REV. FATHER GIESELER, pastor of the Roman Catholic church at Lena, Ill., died Thursday at that place. Funeral will be held on Monday at 11 o'clock at Johnsberg, Ill. Father Gieseler was 40 years old and was born at Desplaines, Ill.

BOAT BURNED; ALL SAVED

HUDSON RIVER STEAMER IS DESTROYED NEAR YONKERS.

City of Troy, Plying Between New York and Troy, Catches Fire Soon After Leaving Metropolis—After Passengers Are Warned Captain Runs Vessel Ashore and All Are Landed Safely—First Mate Overcome with Smoke.

New York, April 5.—[Special.]—The steamer City of Troy of the Troy Steamship line, which left here at 6 o'clock tonight for Troy, caught fire just after it left dock at Yonkers. The fire spread slowly from the kitchen, where it started. After sending members of the crew around the ship to arouse all the passengers and assure them they would be landed in safety, Capt. Gruber headed the steamship toward the shore. The City of Troy brought up alongside Edwin Gould's dock at Ardsley in front of the Ardsley club, where the passengers, mostly Italians, were hustled ashore.

Members of the crew also landed after they had made an unsuccessful attempt to get nine horses off the boat. First Mate Scott was overcome by smoke while he heroically was assisting in the work of getting the passengers off. He soon revived after being treated by a local physician.

Rescue Man and Wife Asleep.

Three Dobbs Ferry young men who thought to assist in getting the horses off are said to have found a man and his wife asleep in one of the cabins after the City of Troy had been cut loose from the dock and turned adrift. They helped the couple descend to a rowboat.

As soon as the boat was seen from shore to be burning a general alarm was sent along the Hudson shore to towns in the immediate neighborhood for fire fighting apparatus. The Dobbs Ferry department got there first. Later the firemen from Irvington and Hastings arrived.

Close Call for Brewery.

After the steamer had been turned loose it drifted about fifty feet, where it came to a stop beside the Manila brewery and there burned fiercely. The brewery is so close to the water's edge it seemed certain the building would take fire. Three fire departments after a hard fight saved the brewery.

Just before the steamer reached the landing three Italians became excited and jumped overboard. Members of the crew jumped after them, and after a hard tussle got them ashore. There probably was a dozen women aboard. The passengers were taken at once to the Dobbs Ferry railroad station, where they were given railroad tickets to their various destinations.

The City of Troy is used more as a freight boat than for transporting passengers.

THREATS AGAINST ROOSEVELT LEAD TO ARREST OF DRIVER.

Brother of Man Who Served in Spanish War Tries to Get Pension for Widow—His Sanity Questioned.

New York, April 5.—[Special.]—Acting under instructions from Washington, P. L. Cole, United States special examiner, caused the arrest today of Marcos Flores, a driver living at the Mills hotel, and had him sent to the psychopathic ward of Bellevue hospital. Flores is said to have written letters containing threats against President Roosevelt, Vespasian Warner, United States commissioner of pensions, and other government officials.

Flores is an undersized man, 32 years old, and of dark complexion. He says he comes from noble Spanish stock and denied having made any threats or that he intended to harm the president.

"I wrote only one letter to President Roosevelt," he said. "In that I eulogized him and he sent me a letter in reply thanking me. You know Roosevelt is all right when you pat him on the back, but he's h——l if you go after him for favors."

ONE DEAD; 5 ILL; FROM FRUIT CAKE

Mystery Surrounds Believed Arsenical Poisoning of an Entire Family.

POLICE SEEK A MOTIVE.

Mrs. Mary Mette, Her Husband, and Four Children Affected by Poison Malady.

A Bohemian fruit cake is believed to have caused the death of Mrs. Mary Mette, 53 years old, 2849 North Harding avenue, yesterday afternoon. Five others of her family were also made violently ill after eating of the same cake. They will be taken to a hospital today.

The physicians who attended the family described the symptoms as those which might result from arsenical poisoning. The police of the Irving Park station were notified and have begun an investigation. Dr. H. G. W. Reinhardt, coroner's physician, suggested the possibility of ptomaine poisoning, but all theories have been laid aside awaiting the result of a post mortem examination and a further analysis of the flour used in making the cake.

A sample of the flour was taken from the Mette residence and this will be examined to determine the possible presence of arsenic.

Entire Family Is Affected.

The persons affected by the cake, in addition to Mrs. Mette, are:

Mette, Charles, 16 years old, a son.

Mette, Frank, 54 years old, the father.

Mette, Joseph, 24 years old, a son, street car conductor.

Mette, Rudolph, 14 years old.

Sladek, Mrs. Mary, a daughter, 30 years old.

Dr. J. E. Waggoner and Dr. George Miller were first called. They made separate diagnoses and reported that the symptoms showed arsenical poisoning. They were not disposed to believe that ptomaine poisoning had anything to do with it and think they see evidence of criminality.

The five members of the family who were suffering last night from the effects of the poison were told to go to a hospital, but refused. After being strongly advised that their refusal might lead to serious results they consented to be removed to where they may be treated more effectively.

The physicians agreed that the symptoms exhibited by all were such as to exclude the possibility of ptomaine poisoning, and the fear the arsenic may work a greater danger than has yet been shown caused them to urge immediate hospital treatment.

Police Start an Inquiry.

An investigation was made by Lieut. Collins of the Irving Park police station to determine if possible if the Mette's have enemies who might have resorted to poison to vent a spite. It developed upon questioning that Mrs. Sladek, who is a daughter of the dead woman, and has until recently resided with her husband at 58 Emma street, quarreled with the latter March 27 and left him to reside with her parents.

She was not disposed to relate to the police the cause of the quarrel or its result beyond the statement that she chose not to live with her husband longer. She was positive that her husband had not been in the house of her parents in the last two months. She said he departed for California on the day before the Mette family was taken ill.

Mrs. Sladek was equally positive that the family had no enemies and could be made to assign no reason for the violent illness which had attacked her brothers as well as herself.

Ate Bohemian Fruit Cake.

The cake, which is believed to have been the cause of the mother's death and the illness of the father and children, was known as a Bohemian fruit cake. It was made last Saturday of flour kept in a barrel in the cellar of the Mette house. Bread dough was the principal ingredient, this being covered with a layer of fruits.

The family ate of the cake on the day before the death of Mrs. Mette. Several were made ill at the dinner table, while Mrs. Mette first felt sick in the evening. In the morning the physicians were called. Other members of the family were made ill following Mrs. Mette's violent prostration.

It was found by one of the physicians that the flour from which the cake was made had been taken from a barrel containing flour which had been used in making bread for some time previous. The members of the family said no ill effects had followed any previous meals. The coroner's physician said the flour barrel was kept in a cellar where ptomaine germs might easily have entered the flour, but he would venture no opinion as to the cause of death until after the post-mortem examination, which will be held today.

VOLUNTEER MILITIA OFFICER INDICTED FOR EMBEZZLEMENT

Assistant Adjutant General of West Virginia Accused of Misappropriating Funds—Sum May Reach $30,000.

Charleston, W. Va., April 5.—The military board of survey which has been investigating the accounts of the assistant adjutant general of this state appeared before the grand jury this afternoon and secured the indictment of Col. A. S. Hutson, who has held that office since 1899 during three state administrations, on the charge of embezzlement of $800. A warrant was issued and he was arrested this evening.

The indictment covers but one specification and, while the state officials and board of survey are reticent, it has become generally understood that the trouble has extended over a period of years and that the amount may reach or exceed $30,000. During the Spanish-American war Col. Hutson served as captain of company H, Second West Virginia regiment, and received his present appointment in 1899, having held it continuously ever since.

Late tonight Col. Hutson was released under $15,000 bond, furnished by J. P. Clark, a wholesale liquor dealer, and U. G. Young, former city street commissioner.

PREACHER ROASTS SOLONS

SAYS MICHIGAN LEGISLATORS DISRESPECT CHAPLAIN.

Views of the Rev. David Howell Stir Ire of Lawmakers, Who Assert That He Will Never Be Given Chance to Pray for Them in Capitol—Asserts That He Refused Invocation Because Members Sat with Their Feet on Desks.

Detroit, Mich., April 5.—[Special.]—"Look at the Michigan legislature; I have refused to offer prayer there because the members sit with their feet cocked up on their desks, the chamber is full of tobacco smoke, and the members are disrespectful to the minister."

This is what the Rev. David Howell of Lansing, a Presbyterian minister, said at the dedication of Boyne City's Presbyterian church last Sunday about the men who make Michigan's laws. News of Dr. Howell's utterances did not reach Lansing until today, and when the lily white legislators heard of the pastor's reflections they were "mad."

Frank White, janitor at the capitol, declared that Dr. Howell in his remarks said the legislators kept their feet on their desks during prayer and that he turned to the Rev. Mr. Rosenbaugh, who was standing by his side, asking if it was not so. White says Rosenbaugh nodded his head in the affirmative.

Legislators Deny Charge.

By the time the story had reached the last real Christian legislator the capitol was at white heat. Various representatives said that Dr. Howell's statements were not true and that due respect was paid ministers. When the invocation is being offered the doors are closed and quiet reigns, it is said. It is declared that the Rev. Mr. Howell need not worry because he never will have a chance to offer prayer in the legislature, at least not during the life of the present body.

When Dr. Howell was questioned today, he looked pained. After a minute's hesitation he admitted that he did make the remarks.

Gov. Stuart Signs 2 Cent Fare Bill.

Harrisburg, Pa., April 5.—Gov. Stuart today signed the bill making the maximum rate of fare on railroads within this state 2 cents a mile. The new law goes into effect Sept. 30 and applies to all steam railways. It prescribes a penalty of $1,000 for violation of its provisions and also provides that a single fare need not be less than 5 cents.

A bill exempting lines less than forty miles long from the provisions of this act and making 5 cents a mile the maximum rate is pending in the house railroad committee. It probably will be amended so as to apply to roads less than fifty miles long and reported favorably.

The railroads claim the act is unconstitutional because it is an unreasonable regulation, and they will test it in the courts.

President McCrea of the Pennsylvania road wrote a strong letter to Gov. Stuart, presenting arguments against the bill and asking him to veto it. The governor, however, remained unconvinced.

RIVER PILOT DIES AS HAND REACHES FOR SIGNAL CORD.

Ohio Packet Lorena Saved from Destruction by Captain, Who Finds Dead Man Still Holding Wheel.

Pittsburg, Pa., April 5.—With the spoke of the pilot wheel clutched in a death grip and a hand extended toward the bell rope, George W. Conant was found lying dead in the pilot house of the packet Lorena, near East Liverpool, O., at an early hour today. Without a guiding hand the big packet, filled with passengers who were peacefully sleeping, wandered hither and thither through the dense fog and was running at high speed into a rock stuffed pool when Capt. John Richardson stopped the craft.

Faithful to his dying moment, Conant exhausted his last bit of strength trying vainly to reach the signal rope, a pull of which would have stopped the boat. His hand was within a few inches of the cord when death overtook him.

The prompt action of Capt. Richardson was all that saved the lives of a score of passengers. Had he remained outside the pilot house a few minutes longer the boat would have been stove in by the treacherous rocks hidden just underneath the surface in the dangerous channel.

SHURTLEFF PRODS HOUSE LAGGARDS.

Truant Legislators Warned They Must Attend to Business or Pay Penalty.

DELAY ON VITAL ISSUES.

Earliest Probable Date of Adjournment of Assembly Is May 15.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Springfield, Ill., April 5.—[Special.]—Speaker Shurtleff got out his whip today and cracked it over empty seats, in which, according to his ideas of propriety, legislators ought to have been sitting and in which they were not sitting, owing to the fact that they had packed their grips yesterday and had departed hence. He has some hope that the sound of that whip will be heard out into the far corners of the state, and that there will be a general understanding that from now on the house of representatives is not a rest cure asylum.

Mr. Shurtleff, because of the fact that the legislature did not get started until Wednesday of this week, owing to the Chicago election, had thought it was only wise and proper that a Friday session, which would be a real session, should be held. He was unable to hold a quorum in Springfield, and when the house convened it was impossible to do anything more than advance bills on the calendar. The sight of empty seats moved him to issue a declaration as follows:

"This house is going to do business from now on. We are going to hold morning and afternoon sessions beginning next week, and there is going to be a quorum here next Friday. Members who are not here Friday are liable to have their bills stricken from the calendar.

Calls Halt on Delay.

"This session is getting too old now for further leisurely contemplation of comparatively unimportant legislation. Next Friday the chair will refuse to recognize objections to the advancement of bills on the calendar as it did today on the call on the regular order.

"Bills must be read or stricken from the calendar or be subject to amendment. Action must be taken and members interested in bills on the calendar must be present to look after them, otherwise they will find that something has happened to them."

Up to date the legislature has done practically nothing with measures of large importance. Part of the delay has been due to the Chicago election, which kept some of the leaders in the general assembly so busy they have had no time to devote to a legislative program.

A number of smaller bills have been passed and scores of others are well advanced on the calendar, but the Chicago charter practically is untouched in either the house or senate; railroad legislation is tied up in the senate and the insurance bills are not far advanced.

There have been hopes of adjournment by May 10, but the best that the house expects is adjournment by May 15, although the senate could clear up a week earlier. To get away at this later date it will be necessary to do some hard work for the remainder of April.

Urge Court Report Bills.

Representatives W. T. ApMadoc, Matthew Mills, Chester W. Church, and Morton D. Hull are endeavoring to interest Chicago lawyers in the bills providing for publication of Supreme and Appellate court reports by contract and their sale at $1.50 a volume.

This campaign work has been made necessary by the fact that a petition against the bills signed by Chicago lawyers was secured by Supreme Court Reporter I. N. Phillips, who caused them to believe that efficiency could not be maintained under the contract system, and that the bills which would reduce the price of the reports in reality represented a political steal.

To offset other arguments of Mr. Phillips, Representative Provine, who introduced the bills, which have been passed by the house and now are in the senate, has secured statements from printing firms asserting that they can furnish the reports in the same style of binding and grade of stock now used at $1.50 a volume and make a profit.

These and statements from court reporters in other states to show that promptness in publishing the reports is a matter entirely within the power of the reporter himself to achieve, have been printed by Mr. Provine and are being circulated among the members of the legislature.

PRONOUNCED DEAD, YET LIVES.

Michigan Man Whose Supposed Demise Occurred Six Days Ago Seems in Deep Sleep.

Millington, Mich., April 5.—[Special.]—Though pronounced dead by physicians, Ernest Cobb, the 23 year old son of M. T. Cobb of this city, has shown signs of life since his supposed demise six days ago. Young Cobb shows apparently that he is in a deep sleep. His face is flushed and his body is not cold nor rigid.

JEROME DECIDES HE WON'T APPEAL

End of Thaw Trial Now Expected to Be Reached Within Few Days.

HELD FOR CONSPIRACY.

Two Men Arraigned on Charge of Having Tried to Aid Peonage Plotters.

NEW YORK BUREAU CHICAGO TRIBUNE, New York, April 5.

Jerome Will Not Appeal; End of Trial Near.

The trial of Harry K. Thaw will be resumed on Monday, and everything now points to its ending about the middle of the week. This prediction is based on the fact that District Attorney Jerome will not make any move before the Appellate division for a review of the decision of Justice Fitzgerald in refusing him a copy of the minutes of the secret examination of Thaw made by the lunacy commission. District Attorney Jerome made up his mind this morning that he would not fight Justice Fitzgerald's ruling. Mr. Jerome made a study of the situation before he came to the conclusion that it would be an unnecessary waste of time to attempt to have the higher courts overrule Justice Fitzgerald.

When the trial was suspended for the appointment of the lunacy commission, Dr. Allen McLane Hamilton was on the stand. He had been called by the defense. It was said that Dr. Hamilton will be the last witness for the defense.

Mr. Jerome may make a speech in opposition to the confirmation of the report of the lunacy commission. If he does it probably will be brief. Mr. Jerome does not intend to call any more witnesses.

That means that Delphin M. Delmas will begin to make his final plea to the jury on Monday morning. Mr. Delmas doesn't seem to know how long he will take. He was allotted a day at the time when everybody thought the trial was near its end, but it is said now by some of the lawyers for Thaw that he may take two days. He has been gathering ammunition for his summing up.

Mr. Jerome may take three hours or less for his speech. Of course he will ask for a verdict of murder in the first degree, and his line of argument may be that if Thaw now is sane, and was insane in 1903, 1904, 1905, on the night he killed White in June, 1906, and as late as last September, when he began to improve, according to the experts, the murder must cure insanity.

Justice Fitzgerald may charge the jury on Wednesday unless something unforeseen happens. The trial will have lasted then twelve weeks.

Among the bequests made in the will of William C. Egleston, which was filed for probate today, is one of $100,000 to Yale university to establish a fund, the income of which is to be used for the purchase of standard works and rare editions for the general library of the university.

Held for Conspiracy; Involved in Peonage Plot?

Following an investigation by United States secret service agents, Michael Tandlisch, a restaurant proprietor, and Stanley Bagg, a private detective, were arraigned before United States Commissioner Shields today and held in $5,000 bail each for further examination on Tuesday. They were charged with conspiracy in connection with peonage cases and with attempting to bribe government officers.

The charges grew out of the recent federal grand jury investigations, which have thus far resulted in the indictment and arrest of half a dozen men charged with peonage, in inducing laboring men to go to the turpentine and lumber camps in the swamps of southern Florida, where it is claimed they were reduced to a condition of practical slavery.

Anthony Comstock today made three raids, in which he seized 15,500 picture postal cards which he claims are obscene. Four men were arrested.

Three More Poolroom Syndicates Uncovered.

"Old 16 Per Cent" Grady, Bob Davis, and the others in on the poolroom syndicate aren't the only ones District Attorney Jerome and his assistant, Mr. Vandiver, are after. For a good many years New York City, unlike ancient Gaul, has been divided into four parts, and in every one of these parts a poolroom syndicate has grown fat.

Tommy, Bob, Park, Charley, and Mike ran a good thing in downtown New York, dividing between $5,000 and $30,000 a month in the years 1899, 1900, and 1901, and probably a good deal more in later years, but in three other fields, just as rich, others were working right along. District Attorney Jerome isn't likely to quit until he finds out something about the three other syndicates.

Here and there in the investigation of the Davis syndicate, they have found papers and memoranda, which refer to others, and which indicate that all were doing nicely. There are things to show that all the syndicates get their racing information from the same source in Jersey City.

While suffering from insomnia and ill health Mrs. Clara Bothfeld, wife of Otto Bothfeld, a member of the New York produce exchange, committed suicide early today by drowning herself in the Narrows at Bay Ridge, Brooklyn.

White Art Treasures Bring $40,000.

At the second day's sale of the Stanford White art collection today prices soared. Harps without strings went for $100, because they were made in France in the reign of Louis XIV. and gilt framed Italian armchairs sold for $180 because of the abiding faith of the purchasers in their antiquity.

When the auctioneer announced a bagpipe, a French cornemuse, of the eighteenth century David Belasco conceived a $160 longing for that cornemuse and got it. A chittarone of the sixteenth century brought $135, and a brother sold for $175.

Another strange instrument was the dulcimer, which went to Belasco for $300. The Princeton club, which is to occupy the White residence after alterations have been made, bid in some of the handsomest furniture.

The total of today's sale was $27,298.50, or about $40,000 for two days.

Libel Decisions Favoring Jerome Are Upheld.

The Appellate division of the Supreme court today handed down a decision affirming the interlocutory judgments by Justice O'Gorman in two cases for libel brought by William Travers Jerome, one against the Star company and the other against the New York Evening Journal Publishing company. Justice O'Gorman overruled demurrers interposed by the defendant companies and those interlocutory judgments are now affirmed by the Appellate division, but with leave to the defendants to withdraw demurrers and to answer on payment of costs.

Appoints Court Martial to Try Maj. Fremont.

Maj. Gen. F. Grant today appointed a court martial to try Maj. Francis P. Fremont of the Fifth United States infantry on charges growing out of his petition in bankruptcy last year. Maj. Fremont is the son of the late Gen. John C. Fremont and has lately returned from Cuba to meet the charges pending against him.

Capt. William J. Glasgow of the Thirteenth cavalry will act as judge advocate. The court martial will convene here next Wednesday.

THREAT AT ART INSTITUTE

DETECTIVE WOOLDRIDGE SAYS HE WILL RAID PICTURE PALACE.

Only Condition a Decision of the Court Against a Dealer in Photographs Whose Arrest He Caused—Fine Is Imposed on Defendant by Judge Fake, and Now It Is Up to the Official Expert to Seize the Treasures.

> ART—The skillful and systematic arrangement or adaptation of means for the attainment of some end.—Webster.
>
> ART—The beautiful in all things so long as it is properly attired. Otherwise it is dangerous.—Detective Clifton Wooldridge.

Webster's definition of art and that of Detective Wooldridge clashed yesterday in the Harrison street police court, and the detective's newer version defeated that of the older authority. Webster's views were backed up by such men as Director W. M. R. French of the Art institute and other experts on art, but the "live wire" of the detective force convinced Municipal Judge Fake that his views are the more practical.

In the heat of the court fight Wooldridge, who swore he was an expert on art, denounced some of the paintings and masterpieces that heretofore have been looked upon as above reproach. And this not the worst—he declared if the courts upheld him in the fight he would raid the Art institute and either destroy or have clothed some of the works of art that adorn its walls and galleries.

Picture Dealer Is Arrested.

The trouble grew out of the chance discovery by Detective Wooldridge that one Frank H. Chambers, president of the White City Art company, 358 Dearborn street, was selling reproductions of art works which portrayed women in various stages of attire and some in no attire at all.

Wooldridge arrested Chambers, confiscated his art treasures, and haled both Chambers and his stock in trade before Municipal Judge Fake on a charge of selling improper pictures. Chambers protested, declaring the matter confiscated was the highest art and could be found in the best homes in Chicago.

"High art, nothing!" exclaimed Wooldridge, and he led the man into court.

Then he summoned Mr. French of the Art institute, Annie M. Church, director of the Fine Arts academy; Harriet Howe, a charity worker, connected with the Chicago Foundlings' home, and other persons looked upon as experts upon such things, to appear in court.

Miss Church appeared to be a modest and unassuming little person and unwilling to either criticise art or testify against the man who was arrested.

"Are those works of art?" asked Judge Fake after Miss Church had qualified as an expert.

"No, they are not art," was the reply after the pictures, one by one, had been placed in her hands.

"They are the science of art," was the vague reply of the witness.

"Can't you give us something we can understand better?" said Judge Fake.

"Well, they are electrotypes, technically," was the reply. "Reproductions of personal form made by artists, but not artistic because they do not carry out the beautiful ideas which are a part of art."

Wooldridge Gives Court Light.

There were some other expert witnesses, all of whom differed as to what art really was. It was not until Wooldridge was called that the court was really informed as to what this subtle thing called art might be.

"Art is not what these are," said Wooldridge as he contemptuously tossed the pictures before the judge.

"What do you call this?" asked Attorney Francis Harper, who represented Chambers.

It was a reproduction of "The Wood Nymphs," which was displayed prominently in the art galleries of the World's Columbian exposition.

"That is not art. It is rotten," said Wooldridge.

"And this—what is it?"

It was, in fact, a reproduction of "Venus at the Bath."

"Worse," said Wooldridge, dismissing it with a word.

"But what if I should say that such things are in the homes of the best people in Chicago—all of the educated and the esthetic?"

"The educated and the what?" asked Wooldridge, puzzled at the word. "I'll tell you, you don't find them in my home or in the homes of my neighbors in Thirty-fifth street."

Then the detective said Director French couldn't be present, but that he had declared some of the pictures shown to him were not art. The lawyer and Chambers argued for four hours, but Judge Fake at last decided that the law had been violated to the extent of $100, which fine was assessed.

"Well, we'll take it to the highest court in the land," said Chambers as he rushed out of the court.

This he is preparing to do. Meanwhile Uncle Sam's postal authorities are after him.

CZAR IN TERROR, TO QUIT THRONE?

a gloomy view of the state of the country and reaffirm their conviction that the duma's end is in sight.

The Telegraph's correspondent says the center of gravity is beyond the walls of Taurida palace, where the duma is sitting. It is in the cities of the rural districts, where fierce passions, hardly suppressed, are turning human beings into wild beasts. This metamorphosis affects the adherents of monarchism as well as the apostles of revolution. Both armies are smitten by madness, which may unexpectedly assume violent, monstrous forms.

Revolutionary emissaries are sowing seeds of disaffection in the army, but some bodies of troops are animated by feelings diametrically opposite, equally powerful and equally explosive. The temper of the workingmen, whether revolutionists or royalists, is inflammatory to the degree when spontaneous combustion may reasonably be apprehended.

Under such conditions the duma is only one of many factors, and by no means the most important. The cabinet's hold on the subversive forces gradually is loosening. It has lost touch with the masses and lacks the firm, unwavering resolve to lead the nation.

Government Awakes to Peril.

The key to the national situation has passed into other hands, and the government seems to be awakening to the consciousness of this important fact. The loyalists in the country, who are petitioning for the dissolution of the duma, declare, through their spokesman, the fiery monk Iliador, that the cabinet is a cowardly insurrectionary body, with which the nation cannot live long. The time has come for the nation to assume power under the guidance of the autocracy. Such utterances, says the correspondent, represent the views of the striving masses, and therein lies their significance and danger.

The Chronicle's correspondent says the grand ducal party is increasing in strength. The union of Russian people has bidden its committees on the day of the dissolution of the duma to organize anti-Jewish outbreaks similar to those at Kisheneff and Bialystok.

The reactionaries, headed by Count Bobrinsky, have decided to hasten the dissolution, replace Premier Stolypin with the grand duke as dictator, suspend specie payments, and issue a manifesto explaining that the representative system, owing to the backwardness of the peasants, makes the non-Russian elements preponderant and so endangers Russia's existence.

Dictator Plan Long Discussed.

This assertion of the Chronicle's correspondent reads like an echo of part of the Mirror's story, but the idea of replacing the premier with the grand duke, with dictatorial powers, long has been one of the favorite and most loudly formulated panaceas of the reactionaries.

Premier Stolypin, so far as can be learned at this moment, still holds the reins, although it would be a daring prophet who would forecast events tomorrow.

Socialists Win in Finland.

HELSINGFORS, Finland, April 5.—The official election results show that the socialists won eighty of the 200 seats in the diet. With the thirteen agrarians the socialists lack only eight of having an absolute majority. The old Finns secured fifty-eight seats, the young Finns, who control the existing government, twenty-five, and the Swedes twenty-four. The diet will meet early in May.

RAPS AMERICAN CANNED GOODS.

Chief Health Officer of Stepney Says 75 Per Cent of Importations Are Unlabeled.

LONDON, April 5.—Dr. Thomas, the chief health officer of Stepney, during a hearing in a police court today on a charge of selling bad condensed milk, made the statement that "75 per cent of the canned goods imported into this country from America are not labeled, and English firms afterwards put on their own labels."

Dr. Wiley Talks of Labels.

Washington, D. C., April 5.—Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, chief of the bureau of chemistry of the department of agriculture, when shown a dispatch from London giving Dr. Thomas' testimony, said:

"It is a common practice among many manufacturers not to put their own labels on their goods, but instead the labels of the jobbers. It may be that goods sent to England are labeled with the names of English jobbers in harmony with this common custom, but whether this is done or not I have no knowledge. Canned goods coming into this country from foreign countries are universally labeled, though the labels are not always correct."

"PLAY DEAD" TO FIGHT.

ROUMANIAN PEASANTS HOLD A BOGUS FUNERAL; REPULSED.

Driven Back by Fire of Soldiers, They Carry Slain and Wounded Into Village and Reappear Later, with a Priest at Head, Carrying Coffins, Which Are Found to Be Empty After Troops Turn Artillery on the Mourning Cortege.

BUCHAREST, Roumania, April 5.—The determined bravery of the insurgent peasantry in the recent fighting is illustrated by a story of the battle of Balaneshti, near Craiova, published in a local newspaper. The insurgents, who numbered 10,000 armed with guns, axes, knives, and scythes, and accompanied by their wives and children, made a desperate attack on a body of Roumanian infantry and artillery. The latter opened fire, killing large numbers of the peasants, who, after an unequal combat, retreated to a village, carrying their dead and dying.

Half an hour later a long funeral procession, headed by a priest, issued from the village, the coffin being followed by thousands of weeping peasants. As they approached the troops the commandant ordered the mourners to halt, but they pressed on and were met by a volley, which killed or wounded several of them. After further fighting the remainder of the peasants fled, leaving the coffins, which, when the soldiers examined them, were found to be empty.

A few minutes later the peasants again attacked the troops, meeting the same fate. Artillery then was brought into acton, and the insurgents were summoned to evacuate the town within three hours. The peasants utilized the interval to unite their forces, and made a fourth assault on the troops, advancing in the face of the artillery fire and rifle volleys and getting into hand-to-hand conflict with the soldiers. The peasants, however, were defeated in the end, and the houses of the village were razed to the ground by the fire of the field guns.

HAVANA, April 5.—A negro manifesto, issued by Gen. Eloy Gonzales at Cienfuegos, says:

"We, the negro people of Cuba, protest against the conduct of the committee on charity and correction that lately visited this city, coming from Havana, in slighting us, the honest and always patriotic negroes of Cuba, who have shed our blood for liberty. If those persons believe it possible to deprive us of our rights they are mistaken. We have dignity and honor and will repel energetically their aggression."

The manifesto continues, charging the whites with the murder of a negro—Capt. Francisco Martinez—at Cienfuegos, and ends with these words:

"We refrain from saying more, not wishing now to disturb the public peace."

The manifesto is causing great excitement among the negroes throughout the island. Martinez, it is declared, was not killed by the whites, as Gonzales says, but died in a brawl of negroes some days ago.

NOTES FROM FOREIGN LANDS.

MANILA—Capt. Fred C. Cole, quartermaster, and F. P. Thornton, former chief clerk in the quartermaster's department, were formally accused in the Criminal court with the falsification of a public document. Cole and Thornton are charged with having padded the pay roll in the quartermaster's shops. It is said that the operations extend over many months and thousands of dollars are alleged to have been secured in this manner.

ESSEN, PRUSSIA—At a general meeting of the German iron and steel manufacturers unanimous objection was voiced against the proposed world's exposition in Berlin in 1913, the twenty-fifth year of Emperor William's reign. It was characterized as futile and unprofitable.

HAMBURG—Pamphlets signed by the "executive committee" have been distributed among the ships where imported English longshoremen are quartered threatening to blow up the vessels, urging at the same time that the Germans employed on the ship leave at once.

ROME—Vaudeville Artists Prince de Broglie and his wife made their début at the Margherita Music hall and were favorably received. Attempts to create a disturbance failed. The seats sold at high prices and many aristocrats were among the sympathetic cheerers.

BUDAPEST—According to statements made in well informed quarters Austria and Hungary have agreed to patch up their quarrel and renew the ausgleich (or compromise agreement regarding the proportions of the common expenditure, etc.) until 1917.

GENEVA—There have been several earthquakes in Switzerland during the last few days. Two on the Austro-Swiss frontier caused numerous avalanches and landslides, wrecking large forests. No lives or buildings are reported lost.

BIARRITZ, FRANCE—King Edward took a special train for Toulon, where he will await the arrival of Queen Alexandra. Their majesties then will sail for Cartagena, where they will be met by King Alfonso.

SCIENCE SETS HARD TASK.

STUDENT KEEPS CONSTANT VIGIL FOR TWO MONTHS.

Graduate of Johns Hopkins University Watches Constantly Beside Apparatus, Making Readings Every Half Hour, in Order to Study the Ionization of Air—Long Trial Nearing Close, with Chance of Improving World's Knowledge Growing Brighter.

Baltimore, Md., April 5.—[Special.]—Over two months of constant vigil, with his only rest being taken in half hour naps, is the task to which William W. Strong has set himself in the interest of science.

Strong, who is a graduate student in physics at Johns Hopkins university, is engaged in the study of the ionization of air, a study that promises to throw much light on existing problems of physical chemistry as well as those of pure physics.

He is working with large and intricate apparatus, and is obliged to take readings every thirty minutes. For some two months or more now Mr. Strong has been sitting by the apparatus, leaving only long enough to eat. Even at night the apparatus must be read and watched, and accordingly Strong has been taking cat naps beside the apparatus, accompanied by an energetic alarm clock that tolls the unwelcome half hours.

The long vigils are now nearing their end, however, and the watcher by night will be amply repaid by valuable results that have been obtained. The results of the work, it is said, will be of much value in bringing about the solution of present problems of ionization.

JAPAN ORDERS NAVAL GIANT.

Sends Commission to England to Arrange for Construction of 21,000 Ton Battleship, Largest in World.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, April 5.—Japan is sending a commission to England to arrange a contract for the biggest battleship in the world. The vessel will be of 21,000 tons, even greater than the Pacificator.

It is understood the Japanese shipyards are full of work and that, as Japan wants ships quickly, she decided to build a new monster in England. It is said the cost will be about $11,250,000. She will have surprising armament.

It is claimed here that from a business standpoint alone the Dreadnought, as the initiator of the type of huge battleships, has paid for herself many times over in orders to British yards from foreign powers. Orders from Brazil, Argentina, and Chili, and the expected order from Japan are cited as proof.

War Veteran Stabs Five.

Dayton, O., April 5.—William H. Huffman, a veteran of the civil war, ran amuck at the Soldiers' Home last night and stabbed five veterans while they were asleep. Huffman thought the men were plotting to kill him and the guards had a terrible struggle before they overpowered him.

CARNEGIE GIVES $6,000,000 MORE.

Ironmaster Sends Pittsburg Institute a Present of Cash and Bonds.

NO STRINGS ATTACHED.

Money Is to Be Used to Support Technical Schools in Different Departments.

Pittsburg, Pa., April 5.—[Special.]—Andrew Carnegie today notified the president of the board of trustees of the Pittsburg Carnegie institute that he is sending them $6,000,000. Of this amount $5,000,000 is in United States Steel corporation 5 per cent bonds and $1,000,000 in cash. The cash is to be used in erecting more technical school buildings. The bonds are an endowment. One million dollars is added to the endowment of $2,000,000 already given to the schools and the other $4,000,000 added to the institute's present $2,000,000 endowment. Altogether the institute trustees, who also control the technical schools, will have an annual income of $450,000.

Mr. Carnegie announced his gift in a letter in which he expressed the wish that the income of $450,000 per annum be applied by the trustees as they deem best to support the technical school's art department, museum, music hall, librarian's school, and such other classes and schools as may be established in connection therewith.

Mr. Carnegie says he thinks the technical schools rank first in practical importance, since they chiefly instruct the sons and daughters of workers in the mills and factories, who labor through the day and seek instruction at night.

Will Not Buy "Old Masters."

He says the art department should not purchase "old masters,'" but confine itself to the acquisition of such modern pictures as are thought likely to become "old masters" with time. The gallery, he says, is for the masses of the people, not for the educated few.

He adds that, although the directors and teachers of the technical schools participate in the pension fund established by him for the advancement of learning, those of the departments do not. A pension system is therefore to be established for them out of the endowment fund, and after the death of the recipient the pension is to be continued to the widow in all cases where needed.

Relief to Taxpayers.

The added endowment of the institute relieves what has been a strained situation in Pittsburg recently. When the institute, or the library then, was built, the city agreed to appropriate $50,000 a year for its maintenance. Since the library grew into an institute, with many costly departments, the trustees have each year asked more money until this year $300,000 was sought. This caused such criticism and the appropriation was scaled down to $250,000. Mr. Carnegie's addition to the endowment means a reduction of half a mill to the taxpayers of this city.

Mr. Carnegie's gifts to Pittsburg now amount to $20,000,000.

Vandals in a Carnegie Library.

Waterloo, Ia., April 5.—[Special.]—Antipathy to Andrew Carnegie's donation to Waterloo's public library is believed to have inspired acts of vandalism committed on the west side building last night to the amount of thousands of dollars. The vandals tore leaves from hundreds of books, destroyed records, tore catalogues to shreds that took years to compile, poured ink over valuable volumes, defaced the walls, and tore the electric fixtures from the fastenings. The same building was entered last fall, when a valuable painting by Rembrandt was cut from the frame. The library will be closed indefinitely pending repairs.

MERRY DEL VAL TO RETIRE?

Papal Secretary of State Expected to Resign as Result of Publication of Montagnini Documents.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

ROME, April 5.—There is every probability that Cardinal Merry del Val will resign his post as papal secretary of state as a result of the publication of the seized Montagnini documents, but not until the sensation created by their publication has subsided.

More Revelations in Paris.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

PARIS, April 6, 3 a. m.—The publication of the flood of Montagnini papers continues. Those referring to Abbé Jouin are still held in reserve, presumably until the abbé's trial. The Figaro prints today a letter from Mgr. Montagnini to Cardinal Merry del Val giving a conversation with Dr. Van Stuers, the Dutch minister here, whom he reports as saying:

"France is becoming more and more corrupt. She always is led by free masonry, which would conduct her to ruin or barbarous revolution."

Gateman and Street Car Conductor Held in Connection with Crossing Collision in Detroit.

Detroit, Mich., April 5.—Warrants charging manslaughter were issued today by Justice Stein for Gateman Leonard Zapf and Street Railway Conductor John Kissane, who were found criminally negligent yesterday by the coroner's jury in connection with the recent collision between a fourteenth avenue street car and a Michigan Central train, in which James F. Smith was killed and a dozen people injured.

CURES ARE SPEEDY AND PERMANENT

"I was afflicted with eczema on my face and hands and I used medical treatment for two weeks, but to no avail. I then commenced using the Cuticura Remedies, and after using two cakes of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment for a little over a month I was entirely cured, Miss Jennie B. Chamberlain, Marcy, R. F. D. No. 1, N. Y., May 28th, 1906."

ANOTHER CURE

"I suffered for more than ten years with a skin disease. Sores were on my legs and they made me sick. Physicians were called in to attend to me, but they did me no good. Nothing seemed to do me any good until one day one of my friends advised me to try the Cuticura Remedies and which I did, and in less than four weeks I was made well. I used the Complete Treatment, consisting of Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Pills and I found them all very successful. My friends were surprised at such a quick cure, and I am glad to tell everybody what the Cuticura Remedies have done for me. Bertha Simpson, Alviso, Calif., May 24, 1906."

ADVERTISE IN THE TRIBUNE.

OIL TRUST SOON TO BE HIT AGAIN

Administration Will Expose Evils Fostered by the Standard Company.

PIPE LINE USED AS CLUB.

Independent Refiners Compelled to Submit to Extortionate Rates or Quit Field.

BY JOHN CALLAN O'LAUGHLIN.

Washington, D. C., April 5.—[Special.]—Another blow will be soon delivered by the administration against the Standard Oil company, which the president charges is in a conspiracy to discredit him and his policies.

This corporation now is undergoing prosecution for violation of the anti-trust and anti-rebate laws. Further prosecution is not contemplated, but it is proposed to inform the public of the pernicious evils this trust has created and fostered, with a view to encouraging further restrictive legislation. The information will be contained in a complete report of the bureau of corporations on the oil industry, which, at last, is on the eve of completion.

A year ago Secretary Garfield, the commissioner of corporations, submitted to the president a long report on the methods of the Standard in connection with transportation and freight rates. This report is the basis for the anti-rebate prosecution in progress in Chicago, Buffalo, and other points. It was only a section, however, of the complete report on the oil industry.

The next section to be made public will be on the use, development, and control of pipe lines, and it will show that pipe lines have contributed more largely than anything else to the development of the Standard Oil monopoly. This fact was brought to the attention of congress when the railroad rate bill was under consideration and a provision was inserted in the measure making pipe lines common carriers, and, as such, subject to supervision by the interstate commerce commission.

Used Pipe Lines as Club.

In accordance with the instructions of the commission the Standard Oil company filed pipe line tariffs, but independent refiners have taken exception to them and to the regulations issued by the trust for the operation of the lines, claiming they are being discriminated against and have derived no real benefit from the legislation. These complaints have not yet been investigated. Individual members of the commission are not satisfied the law is sufficiently comprehensive to benefit the independents, and they look for a continuance of the conditions which existed before the railroad rate law was placed on the statute books.

It is expected that the report of the bureau of corporations will create public sentiment which will lead to the strengthening of the law and the increase of government supervision over the oil business. It certainly will confirm the fact that railroads have been so much at the mercy of the Standard that they have been compelled to act against their own interests, that they even have had to facilitate the construction of pipe lines by the Standard, and thereby deprive themselves of freight, and that, at the behest of the trust, as soon as it completed the pipe line they have advanced the rates on petroleum, which, of course, the independents have paid.

Pipe Line Base for Monopoly.

The effect upon the independents is apparent. The Standard has built a network of pipe lines from the oil fields to its refineries upon the Atlantic seaboard, in the interior near the oil fields of Pennsylvania and Ohio, at Chicago, Kansas City, and various other points. Today it can pump oil from a well in the Indian Territory to the refineries it operates on New York harbor.

The elder Rockefeller used the pipe line as a base for the gigantic monopoly which he has built up. The actual cost of pumping a barrel of oil 100 miles is not more than 2 cents. To pipe crude oil from the fields of western Pennsylvania to the Atlantic seaboard would not cost more than 10 cents a barrel, including interest and depreciation. The railroad charge is more than 40 cents a barrel.

The cost of transporting oil by railroad from the Indian Territory to New York harbor would be prohibitive. It is economical by means of the pipe lines.

Through these lines the Standard has been able to control the foreign trade in American petroleum. On the Atlantic seaboard the trust has seven refineries. But four independent refineries operate on the Atlantic coast.

Independents Made Helpless.

The independents appreciate the importance of pipe lines, and in the past have made earnest efforts to secure this advantage. In every way the standard has sought to prevent the construction of independent lines. It has forbidden railroads to permit such lines to pass under their roadbeds.

While many states have laws making pipe lines common carriers, little attempt has been made by the states to regulate the charges, with the result that the standard has fixed them at a prohibitive figure for independents. Whether the independents have been able to build lines, the Standard has used sharp practices to an extent which usually has compelled the transfer of the line to the trust.

The construction of a network of pipe lines requires the expenditure of a large sum of money, and it is frequently impossible for an independent to raise the sum necessary, and coöperation has been unfrequent. A final reason why the independents were unable formerly to build pipe lines was that to make the operation of such lines possible refiners must be able to market their oil on a large scale.

Through its possession of pipe lines, the Standard has controlled the price of crude petroleum. This advantage has enabled it, of course, to fix the price its competitors shall charge.

Says Standard Is Supreme.

The interstate commerce commission, in a report it submitted to congress on the oil industry, came to the following conclusion, which the bureau of corporations also will express:

"In any industry, whoever controls the avenues of transportation of either the raw material or the finished product, can speedily drive all competitors out of existence. The production and distribution of petroleum is no exception to this rule. While there may be feeble competition in limited areas, even that must exist largely upon sufferance of the Standard Oil company, so long as it has practically exclusive use of its present system of pipe lines."

The government desires all common carriers with regard to traffic to equalize conditions of competition in given markets through the use of commodity rates, relatively more favorable to distant than to the nearer producing points. As the commissioner of corporations has observed, if this policy had been pursued in the case of oil it would have been to the material advantage of the producer and refiner, and would have tended to offset the natural advantages of the Standard. The policy of that corporation has been, however, of a contrary character, and natural disadvantages under which the independents suffered have been enormously increased.

BUSTER MISSING FOR A WEEK.

Creature Answering to Name Is a Cat Belonging to Lois Tuttle, 606 Division Street.

Somewhere about the north side is a lost kitten whose owner, Miss Lois W. Tuttle, 606 East Division street, is anxiously awaiting its return. "Buster," for that is the cat's name, has a coat of white with gray markings. The playful tricks and the comforting presence of Buster have been missed from the Tuttle household for nearly a week. As Buster is an intelligent cat and knows his own name, all persons with superfluous cats which might closely resemble the appearance of Buster are discouraged from presenting their cats.

has been formed, the purpose of which is supposed to be to defeat the president in the present and in the future. The combination is supposed to be directed to prevent new legislation of the Roosevelt type during the rest of his term of office and then to prevent the election of a successor who would be likely to carry out his policies.

How Roosevelt Understands It.

That undoubtedly is the understanding the president has of the situation at the present time, and, as he has means of information which are not accessible to newspapers or to the general public, his opinion is worthy of serious consideration, in spite of all denials from interested sources and in spite of attempts by his acknowledged enemies to show that his belief is the result of a disordered imagination.

That the administration will take a legitimate hand in national politics there cannot be much question. President Roosevelt undoubtedly understands the indelicacy of a person in his position seeking for purely personal reasons to dictate the presidential succession. If, however, there does exist a rich man's conspiracy to tie his own hands for the remainder of his term and to elect a "reactionary" as his successor, the president would undoubtedly feel justified into going into one state after another, through his trusted friends, and asking for the election of delegates to the national convention who could be depended upon to carry out the Roosevelt idea, even to the extent of voting for a candidate known to be acceptable to him and voting against candidates known to be not in harmony with his theory of government.

Out After Delegates.

In fact this process has commenced more or less in Senator Hansbrough of North Dakota, who as he left the White house today did not hesitate to intimate that his state would elect delegates to the next national convention who would be Roosevelt men first, and who would have as second choice no man who was not known to be affirmatively acceptable to the president. This is likely to be the plan of campaign in a dozen other states in the north.

There will be no immediate declaration from the White house against the election of delegates instructed for Roosevelt. At the proper time the president will, it is said, reiterate his previous declination and positively refuse to be a candidate. What the administration leaders will be instructed to secure in each state where possible will be a delegation which will be pledged man by man to vote for no candidate for the presidency who is not acceptable to Mr. Roosevelt. This will be done, not on the theory that he wishes to dictate his successor, but that he desires to insure the success of the policies he has inaugurated in his own administration.

It does not at all follow that President Roosevelt will insist on the nomination of any one man. All he desires is that if delegates are elected to the national convention who are instructed to vote for him, they should carry out the spirit as well as the letter of their instructions. He does not want to see his enemies masquerading under his flag. The administration would recognize the right of friends of an opposition candidate to fight in the open and get delegates wherever they can on a fair basis.

The president will not, if he can help it, I believe, permit the stealing of avowed Roosevelt men and their use to defeat policies for which he has stood before the people.

Has No Man in View.

At the right time, when declining the nomination himself, he might informally let it be known that a man like Taft, or Cortelyou, or Root, or anybody else, including Fairbanks, or Cannon, or Hughes, or Foraker, would be acceptable to him, provided at that time he had become convinced that any of those people would be likely to stand fast for progressive policies of the present president.

To this extent, the administration will be in national politics, if I am any judge, from now on. It will be for the purpose of electing delegates pledged to a progressive policy, and pledged to oppose a candidate or platform which would be in the nature of a reversal of the Roosevelt form. If candidates are not opposed to the Roosevelt policy, it will not be difficult for them to make that fact known, but if they appear to be pushed exclusively or improperly by the great corporate interests, the president will have the right to assume that those particular candidates are not likely to fulfill the promises of his administration.

In that case, he is more than likely to take the people into his confidence, according to his invariable system of politics. This, so far as I can learn, is a fair statement of the present political policy of the administration, and it doesn't indicate either brain storms or nervous prostration, but rather an acute conception of the temper of the American people.

MAN WHO SOLD LETTER HELD.

E. H. Harriman's Former Stenographer Formally Accused of Revealing Private Correspondence.

New York, April 5.—[Special.]—E. H. Harriman's discharged stenographer, Frank W. Hill, who is charged with selling the letter which Harriman wrote to Sidney Webster about his relations with President Roosevelt, was arraigned in Police court today, charged with misdemeanor. He was held in $1,000 bail for examination Monday morning.

Alexander Miller, secretary of the Union Pacific, was asked if he contemplated making any application for the prosecution of the morning newspaper which published the letter.

"I do not think we have considered that yet," he said. "The matter is in the hands of the district attorney. We shall certainly proceed against the newspaper if Mr. Harriman will make the necessary complaint," said Mr. Krotel. "There is no doubt the newspaper is just as guilty as Hill, who sold them the letter."

NEBRASKA IS NOT AFRAID.

Both Houses of Legislature Adopt Resolution Declaring Confidence in President Roosevelt.

Lincoln, Neb., April 5.—Both houses of the Nebraska legislature today adopted a resolution indorsing the position of President Roosevelt in his controversy with E. H. Harriman, and declaring the confidence of the senate in the president's motives.

RASPS HARRIMAN FOR ALTON DEAL.

Government Counsel Says Wizard Took $80,000,000 Without Giving a Dollar.

OTHER SIDE IS HEARD.

Railroad Lawyer Claims Union and Southern Pacific Merger Is Legal.

Washington, D. C., April 5.—[Special.]—The interstate commerce commission's investigation of E. H. Harriman's manipulation of the Chicago and Alton and his Southern Pacific deals ended today.

The commission has taken the case under advisement. A decision is not looked for for some time.

There were three addresses today, one by Attorney John G. Milburn in defense of Mr. Harriman's course, and one each by Special Attorneys C. A. Severance and Frank C. Kellogg in criticism of it.

Mr. Milburn enlarged upon the contention that the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific had not been competing lines before their consolidation, but urged that even if they were, one of them had the right to purchase the property of the other.

Messrs. Severance and Kellogg contended for the applicability of the anti-trust law to the purchase of the Southern Pacific by the Union Pacific, and Mr. Kellogg criticised sharply Mr. Harriman's dealings in the Chicago and Alton securities.

Harriman and the Alton.

He said that the liabilities of that road had been increased to the extent of $80,000,000, "for which," he declared, "the syndicate did not give the company one dollar aside from a moderate equipment." To say that it was necessary to make this addition in view of the excellent credit of the road was to his mind incredible. Mr. Harriman had said that $22,000,000 had been expended on the road, but if that was true not all the money had been a part of the expanded capital. All the improvements could have been made by a comparatively slight increase of the road's interest account.

He claimed that the Alton bonds had been sold to Harriman and friends at 65 cents on the dollar when they could have been made to bring par. "No one can say that that is conservative financing," he said. He declared that the proceeds of this sale had been used in paying dividends to the stockholders, the men who had bought the bonds. Deducting the dividends, the bonds had really been obtained for about 49 cents on the dollar.

How Nation Is Interested.

Mr. Kellogg contended that the country was largely interested in such transactions and urged that congress should limit the inflation of railroad securities. There could be "no excuse for expanding a railroad's securities merely for the purpose of making a profit out of them.

"I deny the necessity and the morality of such a course," he said, and expressed the opinion that a restriction should be placed upon such transactions. He did not believe in unreasonable restrictions, but it was not in the interest of the roads themselves that they should be largely utilized for investment.

In Defense of Harriman.

Continuing his argument, Attorney John G. Milburn laid down the following general propositions:

1. A restraint of trade to be within the anti-trust act must be the direct, immediate, and necessary effect of the transaction, and not merely an indirect or incidental result.

2. A restraint of trade consequent upon a purchase of property, in any of its various forms, is incidental merely and therefore not within the act.

3. The purchase must of course be real; if a mere device for the suppression of competition, as it was held to be in the Northern Securities case, while it may be effective to operate upon the legal title as between the parties, it is in fact unsubstantial and may be disregarded.

4. Provided the purchase be real and substantial, the motive which induces it cannot affect the result.

Not Against the Law.

5. Therefore the purchase by a railroad company, within its corporate powers, of an interest in another line of railway, is not within the act, because the restraint upon trade, if any, is not direct, but merely incidental to the purchase.

6. If, however, the purchase by a railroad company, within its corporate powers, of a line of railway, made to suppress competition, be obnoxious to the act, that result does not follow if the purchase be made for a legitimate and proper purpose of the purchasing company.

7. In any event, a purchase by a railroad company of an interest in a line of railway which is not parallel and competing, is not within the act.

8. The purchase by the Union Pacific of its interest in the Southern Pacific was not made to suppress competition, but to protect its property by an extension of its line in that way to the Pacific coast.

9. The Union Pacific and Southern Pacific are not parallel or competing lines or systems.

CLEVELAND TRACTION WAR ON.

Settlement Negotiations Broken Off When Company Rejects Holding Company Plan.

Cleveland, O., April 5.—Negotiations looking to a settlement of the traction question in this city were terminated today by the Cleveland Electric Railway company announcing that it declined to accept the proposition to turn over its property to a holding company on the basis of $60 per share. It was also declared that the company would refuse to consider any further proposition from the so-called holding company on any basis.

Following this announcement the company withdrew the sale of tickets at the rate of seven for 25 cents, and resumed the old rate of eleven tickets for 50 cents, with 5 cents as the cash fare.

It is said the street railway fight between the Cleveland Electric Railway company and the city administration will be resumed at once, and it is believed sensational developments will follow within the next few days.

Pickpockets Fleece Chicago Man.

South Bend, Ind., April 5.—[Special.]—Thomas D. Scott of Chicago had his pockets picked today while attending the convention of the Northern Indiana Teachers' association, the thief getting $476 in checks and cash.

NEEDS WIFE IN '08 RACE.

IOWA MAN ADVERTISES FOR ONE TO RULE WHITE HOUSE.

Voters of State Tell Andrew Townsend Hisey That President of the United States Should be Married, and, Despite His 54 Years, He at Once Sets on Foot Plan to Wed the Most Popular Girl That He Can Find.

Des Moines, Ia., April 5.—[Special.]—Because the voters of Iowa think the president of the United States should be a married man, Andrew Townsend Hisey, who yearns to dwell in the White house, has had published in a number of Iowa papers the following advertisement:

WANTED—YOUNG WOMAN OF REFINEMENT; am seeking a wife; am 54 years old and of Quaker descent. Apply ANDREW TOWNSEND HISEY.

Hisey once ran for the office of governor of Iowa, and now that he knows the views of Iowans on the qualifications an executive should have says he probably would have been elected if he had been married.

Determined to Win.

He is determined to fit himself for the 1908 race and will start a contest in every city and town in the state. The most popular girl in each will be decided by a contest in which votes will cost 1 cent each. Then the winners in each town will be entered in a grand final struggle. The lucky one must poll a majority of votes cast. If no one gets a majority, then Hisey is to make his own choice.

Would Agree to Time Limit.

Hisey is frank in announcing that he will expect his wife, when he gets her, to remain Mrs. Hisey only while he is president of the nation. When his term of office expires, if she wishes, she can withdraw from the arrangement.

OIL TRUST SEEKS TO PROVE IT DIDN'T KNOW THE RATE.

Attorneys Argue for Admission of Evidence of Its Innocence in Paying Six Cents on Shipments to East St. Louis.

Standard Oil attorneys took their last stand in behalf of their client yesterday when forced to argue as to the admissibility of evidence tending to show the defendant company did not know it was violating the law in accepting a 6 cent rate on shipments to East St. Louis. Arguments on this question were made by Attorneys John S. Miller and Moritz Rosenthal, and these will be answered today by District Attorney Edwin W. Sims and his special assistant, James H. Wilkerson.

Should Judge Landis overrule the objection made by the government to evidence of this character, it will throw down the bars for the company to prove by any number of prejudiced witnesses that the Standard company made diligent search for the legal rate to East St. Louis, and in using the 6 cent one believed it was complying with the law.

The point involved, according to Mr. Rosenthal, is a basic principle of justice, and in his argument he cited cases from both English and American jurisprudence which held that the right of a defendant to show his intent at the time of the alleged crime was committed cannot be denied.

Saves Child; Loses Own Life.

Marietta, O., April 5.—[Special.]—Mrs. Arthur Matthew today leaped from a carriage during a runaway with an infant in her arms. She was killed instantly, but the child escaped.

MAY SEND TROOPS TO ARREST DIETZ

Sawyer County, Wis., Grand Jury Indicts Holder of Cameron Dam.

THINK MIND UNHINGED.

Inquisitors Urge Sheriff to Call on Governor for Aid to Suppress Anarchy.

Chippewa Falls, Wis., April 5.—[Special.]—The Sawyer county grand jury has indicted John A. Dietz on three counts, one for resisting an officer and two for attempted murder. The jury finds that anarchy exists in the Cameron dam vicinity, and recommends that Gov. Davidson be asked to furnish military assistance to capture Dietz, believing the county officials powerless.

In the matter of the ownership of the dam the jury states it has examined the county records and finds that Dietz has no title to it, and further asserts that the Mississippi River Logging company, whose property Dietz is holding, has tried to arbitrate the differences or have the title decided by the courts, but that Dietz has always refused to listen to their overtures. A large number of witnesses were examined and the jury thoroughly went into all the phases of the case. Sheriff Clark will ask the governor for assistance to capture Dietz, and it is probable several companies of militia will be sent to Cameron dam.

Text of Jury's Findings.

The jury's report says: "We, the grand jury of Sawyer county, present herewith three indictments against John F. Dietz; one for resisting an officer and two for attempted murder. We think it proper to further report that a part of this county at Cameron dam, on Thornapple river, is not subject to the laws of the state, and has not been for three years, but has been held by John F. Dietz by an armed force in defiance of the law and in contempt of the courts. Property of great value is withheld from its owners and officers and citizens have been fired on and their lives endangered."

The jury next reviews the title to the dam and finds that it is not the property of Dietz and that the rightful owners have been compelled to abandon their property because of Dietz's position.

Continuing, the report says:

"Four criminal warrants have been regularly issued against Dietz. The first was sworn out by John Mulligan on a charge of assault and battery, the second by Patrick Magin for attempted murder, the third by the district attorney for the same offense, and the fourth by James Gylland, also for attempted murder.

Believe Dietz Is Insane.

"Different bodies of officers have done everything that can be reasonably expected of them, but owing to the location of the place and the character of the surrounding country, it seems impossible for any civil officer to arrest him without loss of life.

"There is reason to believe that he is more or less insane, or at least desperate, and a military force will be necessary to take him, if bloodshed is to be avoided. We think the state should take the matter in hand and use sufficient force to arrest him, if possible, without loss of life, as it may turn out that he is not mentally responsible."

HANGING URGED IN LESLIE CASE.

Extreme Penalty Demanded by State's Attorney for Leopold and Nicholas.

TRIAL NEAR ITS CLOSE.

Miss Phyllis Campbell Says One of Accused Men Asked Her to Interfere.

"That you shall mete out to these two men the extreme penalty of the law and send them to the gallows, I charge you, will be but the exercise of your duty to yourselves and the law; to yonder gray headed couple who mourn the loss of a beautiful daughter, to that little motherless son, and to your God.

"That the extreme penalty of the law is but justice to these two men who committed this cold blooded, atrocious, miserable crime, I charge you, gentlemen of the jury."

With this declaration to the jury by Attorney Edward S. Day after a three hours' argument, yesterday's session of the Leslie murder trial came to a close. Attorney Day was bitter in his arraignment of the two defendants, Howard Nicholas and Leonard Leopold. He repeatedly demanded that the jury send the two men to the gallows.

Mr. Day opened the arguments after the last witness left the stand an hour before the morning adjournment. Attorney Marshall Gallion for the defense will open today's session with a two hours' plea for the life of his client, Howard Nicholas. He will be followed by Leopold's attorney, Samuel Foos. Assistant State's Attorney Benedict Short will close for the state. The case will go to the jury Monday evening or Tuesday. Contrary to the ordinary rule, there will be an all day session today.

Girl Turns on Nicholas.

The state caused a surprise in the testimony of Miss Phyllis Campbell, 628 Illinois street, Indianapolis. As the witness entered the room and took the witness stand, Nicholas turned pale. She told a straightforward story that a week ago she had received a letter from Nicholas, asking that she "save his neck" by assuming the name of Grace Kimberlin and testify that he had bought some diamonds of her for $115 last May 11.

"I didn't want to become implicated in this case, so I burned the letter and did not reply," said the witness. "Then a detective, Sergeant George W. Pearsall of the Chicago police department, called at my residence in search of Miss Kimberlin. I told him of the letter and was compelled to come here as a witness."

"Were you ever known by the name of Grace Kimberlin?" Attorney Short asked.

"I was not," replied the witness.

"Did a Miss Kimberlin ever live at your address in Indianapolis?"

"I never heard of her."

Introduced to Mrs. Leslie.

"I was a friend of Howard Nicholas. He introduced me to Margaret Leslie," continued Miss Campbell. "We all were stopping at the Palace hotel. I left for Indianapolis five days before Margaret's death. We had become pretty good friends, and I promised to take word for her to her parents, who at that time were living in Indianapolis."

Miss Campbell denied that Nicholas made any pecuniary offer to come here and testify in his behalf. Nicholas was trapped by giving Miss Campbell's number to which he had addressed the letter. That was the clew on which the detective worked.

Woody Leslie, the 12 year old son of the murdered woman, sat all afternoon at the press table busily writing. At the close of the session he proudly showed his grandfather several pages covered with crude writing. In a childish way he had described the testimony and how he had heard that Nicholas and Leopold had choked and murdered his mother.

Attorney Rebukes Accused.

Attorney Day spent most of the afternoon reciting sections of the Nicholas confession, in particular that telling how he and Leopold murdered Mrs. Leslie. Turning on the two defendants, in a highly excited tone of voice, he addressed them:

"You, Howard Nicholas, the false friend of Margaret Leslie, introduced Leopold as a theatrical manager, when he didn't have 5 cents in his pocket; you stepped across the room and threw the cigaret out of the window as a prearranged signal for Leopold to put his murderous fingers about her throat. Fiends incarnate, murderers, like devils, then you sat on the edge of her bed with her prostrate figure lying on the floor, and gloated over the spoils of your deed, the diamonds and jewelry."

By numerous court decisions Attorney Day endeavored to prove that it mattered not which of the men did the actual deed, both were equally guilty. He argued that the men went to Margaret Leslie's room with the intention of murdering her for her diamonds. A great deal of his argument was to disprove Nicholas' story that a man named Harry Clayton, and not Leopold, was with him the night of the murder; and to convince the jurymen that the prisoners' stories of police abuse were false.

AMUSEMENT PIER PROJECT OPPOSED BY BUSINESS MEN.

Plan to Build Huge "Crystal Palace" Into Lake Thought Against Civic Beauty Policy.

The project to build a marine amusement pier, extending a mile out into the lake at Thirty-first street, with a "Crystal Palace" theater, dancing pavilion, palm garden, cafés, and moving sidewalks on it is opposed by the Commercial club and other civic organizations interested in the development of Chicago along esthetic lines.

"Personally, I am against anything that will disfigure or lumber up the lake," said President George E. Adams of the Commercial club yesterday. "The lake is Chicago's chief charm. We don't want to cheapen it and convert it into a Coney Island. From what I know of the enterprise, I should say it stands in the way of comprehensive plans for the beautification of Chicago."

There is now pending in the legislature a bill authorizing the construction of the pier which will cost $1,125,000 and require a year in building, the press agent says. Representative Oglesby—the one who is against civil service—introduced it.

The pier, according to the plans, is from 75 to 350 feet wide, 50 feet high at its minimum point, and 350 feet high where the Crystal palace is to be built. This structure has a theater that will hold 2,000 people on a pinch, palm gardens enough for 2,000 more, a ballroom for 500 dancers, and a café with a capacity of 750.

WOMAN JUSTICE ASKS BUSINESS

Mrs. McCulloch Wishes Not Only to Fine Automobilists but to Perform Marriage Ceremonies.

Catherine Waugh McCulloch, new justice of the peace of Evanston, followed her announcement of a few days ago that she would compete with Justice Boyer in the automobile business, with another one yesterday that she will compete with Justice Charles Voigt, the marrying justice of the north shore suburb.

A young woman here in Evanston phoned me yesterday that she was anxious to be married immediately, but said she would wait for the ceremony until I secured my commission," Mrs. McCulloch said.

"I have been deluged with congratulations from woman's clubs and suffragists since my election and I am receiving invitations daily to attend banquets and club meetings of lawyers and suffragists."

The memorial hall fund is for establishing a prominent headquarters for the society on the $50,000 site which has been purchased in Washington.

HOW TO CURE SMOKE EVIL

CITY CLUB TELLS WHAT SCHUBERT OUGHT TO DO.

Blames His "Incompetency and Laxity" for Present Sooty Condition of Atmosphere, Declares Present Ordinance Ample, and Presents to Civil Service Commission a "Platform" Setting Forth Steps Needed for Abolishing Nuisance.

The long grilling that has been undergone by Chief Smoke Inspector John C. Schubert at the hands of the City club before the civil service commission drew near a close yesterday when Attorney Francis X. Busch presented the commissioners a formidable indictment of the smoke department. It was defined as the position of the City club upon the enforcement of the smoke ordinance and unequivocally declared that "the incompetency, inefficiency, and laxity of the chief smoke inspector and the supervising engineer alone are responsible for the prevalence of smoke in Chicago atmosphere."

Mr. Busch's closing blow at the department was "the smoke platform of the City club," based on the evidence given in the investigation.

City Club's Smoke Platform.

The platform follows:

"The prevention of smoke in all stationary plants is practicable.

"The ordinance of the city of Chicago is broad and ample to accomplish such smoke prevention.

"The incompetency, inefficiency, and laxity of the chief smoke inspector and the supervising mechanical engineer are alone responsible for the deplorable prevalence of smoke in our atmosphere.

"Every stationary plant in Chicago that violates may be classified into one of the two following classes:

"1. Plants which are capable of being operated smokelessly, but violate on account of carelessness in firing.

"2. Plants which are either out of repair or are not properly designed to be operated without violating the ordinance.

"The committee takes the position:

"a. That all plants which are capable of being operated without violating should be vigorously and continually prosecuted until such time as it is to the interest of the owner to insist that his fireman operate his furnace with sufficient care to avoid violating the ordinance.

"b. That all plants which are not capable of being operated without violating the ordinance should be subject to a thorough inspection by a competent deputy inspector to ascertain what changes are necessary to prevent smoke; that the owner then should be called to the office of the department, given an explanation of the conditions of his plant, and be given the alternative of being constantly and persistently fined or agreeing to rehabilitate with the best possible devices for the elimination of smoke, and that during such rehabilitation immunity should be granted to the owner only on the following conditions:

"That he burn a grade of coal best suited to eliminate or to lessen the amount of smoke.

"That the plant should be operated with the greatest care.

"That the plans for rehabilitation be presented within a reasonable fixed period.

"That the actual work on rehabilitation be begun within a reasonable fixed period.

"That the work be completed within a reasonable fixed period.

"That immunity should be granted only upon the approval of a municipal judge.

"That where a plant owner persistently violates the ordinance and after continued and vigorous prosecution makes no adequate effort to comply with the ordinances, but puts himself in an attitude of hostility to its enforcement, then the fires of such plant should be drawn and the nuisance summarily abated.

Smokeless Chicago Possible.

"The committee from the City club believes that if the ordinance is enforced vigorously on these lines the result will be a smokeless Chicago in a short time and without hardship to any one."

Attorney Sexton for the defense was given until Monday to file a brief in answer to the statements made by Attorney Busch and the City club, after which the commission will take the entire case under consideration.

Attorney John Sexton presented a defense of the smoke department to the effect that it has done as well as it could under the existing circumstances. He will conclude his arguments Monday.

DEATH GRIEVES MAUDE ADAMS.

Actress Weeps Over Body of Company's Wardrobe Custodian, Who Was Suffocated by Gas.

Mrs. Mary A. Neighlor, 65 years old, wardrobe custodian of the "Peter Pan" theatrical company, was found dead yesterday morning in her room at the Imperial hotel, 256 State street. A jet of a small gas stove in the room was open. It is believed Mrs. Neighlor left the gas jet open after she had prepared a lunch before going to bed, and that her death was accidental.

The body was taken to Rolston's undertaking rooms, 370 Wabash avenue, where it was identified by Miss Maude Adams, the star in "Peter Pan." Miss Adams wept when she saw the body.

The inquest was continued until next Thursday morning.

EASTERN ROADS TO FACE DEMANDS

Will Be Asked to Increase Wages of Employes as Western Lines Have Done.

UNIONS EXPECT TO WIN.

Brotherhood Leaders Preparing to Present Request in Latter Part of Year.

The next big movement for higher wages on the part of the railroad brotherhoods will be directed against the eastern rail systems, and the leaders of 150,000 employés are preparing to take joint action.

Actual demands probably will not be made until the latter part of the present year, but when they are filed every class of labor will be represented, with the possible exception of the switchmen, who succeeded in getting an increase in pay from the roads last fall.

The formation of a joint board, through which the negotiations will be conducted on behalf of the men, was completed last week at a meeting in Buffalo. The conference was attended by officers of the four large brotherhoods—the engineers, conductors, firemen, and trainmen. Although preliminary in nature, it is said the meeting outlined roughly the extent to which the employés will seek to test the generosity of the railroad corporations. Probably a general wage advance of 10 per cent will be asked.

Quick Agreement Expected.

It is settled definitely that the nine hour day agitation will be dropped temporarily. This was determined by the failure of the employés of western roads, in the conference just ended, to secure a reduction of hours.

Leaders of the rail unions believe their wage demands will not be strenuously opposed in the east because of the action of the western roads in granting them a substantial advance in pay. The Pennsylvania, the Philadelphia and Reading, and one or two other eastern roads have anticipated the movement already by giving a 10 per cent increase to all employés. These roads will, of course, be eliminated from the move.

The terms of the settlement agreed on by the western railroad managers and the trainmen and conductors were gone over again yesterday by the two committees and a few minor changes made. Today the agreement will be ratified formally. Many of the trainmen left at night for their homes to report to their local lodges regarding the success of their efforts.

Settlement Pleases Trainmen.

Chief Morrissey of the trainmen's organization said general satisfaction was felt by his men over the concessions obtained from the roads.

"I have been doing a little estimating," he said, "and I believe the average advance in wages we secured will be more than 11 per cent. Some classes of employés will get as high as 18 per cent. These are the conductors on work trains.

Regarding the efficacy of government mediation under the little used Erdmann law, Mr. Morrissey said he approved highly of the idea. He said he favors conciliation in labor disputes provided the mediators are men whose official position lends dignity and responsibility to the negotiations.

Firemen Not Yet Satisfied.

The railroads now have satisfied the demands of all but one class of employés—the locomotive firemen. The conference with the firemen, which temporarily were suspended pending the outcome of the other negotiations, will be resumed next week. Chief John J. Hannahan said he could not predict the result.

The roads are said to be considering the extension of their wage increases to the firemen. The latter, however, have refused to waive their demand for the nine hour day. It is thought this will not constitute a serious obstacle to a settlement.

SUES PASTOR FOR SLANDER.

Charles E. Everett Appears in Court Against the Rev. David D. De Long for Defamation of Character.

A suit for $20,000 for slander brought against the Rev. David D. De Long of the Fellowship Congregational church by Charles E. Everett, a worker in the church, is being heard by a jury in Judge Barnes' division of the Superior court. Everett alleges that in 1905 Mr. De Long circulated stories in effect that he (Everett) had been guilty of improper actions and was not a man in whose custody girls might be intrusted. These charges came, it is alleged, at a time when Everett was giving the girls and boys of the church outings which he personally superintended. The trial is being attended by many friends of the litigants, some of whom have been called to testify.

ARMED PEACE AT LORAIN.

OHIO MILITIA AWAITS CALL TO STOP STRIKE WAR.

Four Companies of State Troops Will Be Placed in Field if Outbreak Occurs in Shipyard Trouble—Another Trainload of "Unfair" Laborers Is Sent In—Pittsburg Threatened with Beer Famine Because of Walkout of Brewery Employes.

Lorain, O., April 5.—With the members of Company B, Ohio National Guard, under orders and sleeping in the Lorain armory, and three companies of Cleveland troops under orders and ready to respond to a call at any moment, quiet prevails tonight at the yards of the American Shipbuilding company, the scene of rioting for two days past.

Another trainload of strike breakers, numbering from 150 to 200, arrived this evening and the men were escorted into the yards under cover of the guns of detectives and special deputies. The strikers were congregated about in squads, but saw the march of the latest recruits into the shipyards without any offer of violence.

Supt. Le Marche declared tonight that over 400 strike breakers are now inside the shipyards and that fully 1,000 more are available and will be brought in within the next few days.

Pittsburg Near Beer Famine.

Pittsburg, Pa., April 5.—Pittsburg is threatened with a beer famine as the result of the strike today of 1,500 workers employed by twenty-four breweries in this city. The Pittsburg Brewing company and the Independent Brewing company, two of the largest breweries in the city, are completely tied up.

Meetings of the Western Pennsylvania Brewers' association are being held to decide whether open shop will be declared. It is said that this will be done and men will be imported to take the place of the strikers.

The brewers agreed to give the men shorter hours and more pay if they would agree to submit the other questions to arbitration, but this was refused and the men went out today.

Attempt to Arbitrate Strike.

Kalamazoo, Mich., April 5.—Committees from the Commercial club, the striking employés of the Michigan United railway, and the officials of the company met with Mayor Thompson today in an effort to settle the strike on the trolley lines. The officials agreed to have a committee of seven members of the Commercial club arbitrate the differences, and the strikers will announce their decision tomorrow.

Peace Near at Goldfield.

Goldfield, Nev., April 5.—That the mines of Goldfield will be running full blast within a week seems assured. Last night the Industrial Workers of the World held a protracted meeting, which was attended by the miners, and a motion was carried to permit the miners to withdraw from the Industrial Workers of the World.

By this action the miners become a separate organization, retaining the Western Federation of Miners' charter, and accede to the demands of the mine owners.

BOOKER WASHINGTON TALKS; URGES NEGROES TO WORK.

Says Every Boy Should Learn a Trade and Be Taught to Save Money—Speaks to 3,000 in Olivet Church.

Booker T. Washington addressed 3,000 colored people last night at the Olivet Baptist church, Twenty-seventh and Dearborn streets. He was introduced by the pastor of the church, the Rev. E. J. Fisher, and later was guest of honor at a banquet given in the church, at which D. H. Harris was toastmaster.

In opening, Mr. Washington declared his loyalty to his race.

"People frequently ask me why I don't move out of the south," he said. "It might seem to some that one could educate himself and enrich himself to that point where he would desire to tear himself away from the negro race, but as long as I live my home will be down there among the black men of the south. If I could enter the spirit world and could have my choice of race and color, I would say: 'Make me an American negro.'"

Above all, Mr. Washington encouraged the idea of industry. He urged that every man see that his son learn a trade and that the young be instructed to save their money.

"Every kind of honest labor is honorable," he said. "But the negro should rise to the more dignified stations of life until one walking down State street would have to go into a store and purchase goods to know whether the black man he sees in there is the manager, the cashier, or the porter.

"The negro is so associated with certain humbler walks of life that only this morning, in the train a traveler took me for a porter and asked me the way to the dining car. I told him. They often have asked me to make up their berths, but I had to decline because I didn't know how."

LARGEST 2 CENT CIRCULATION IN THE WORLD.

A WOMAN JUSTICE.

When Illinois women, moved by a laudable ambition, asked to be admitted to the bar they were met with the objection that they were ineligible. The general assembly enacted a general law that no person should be precluded from any occupation, profession, or employment by reason of sex, with a thoughtful proviso that women should not be required to work on streets or roads or serve on juries. The general assembly also ordered that no person should be refused an attorney's license on account of sex. The legal field is as open to women as it is to men.

At a later day women began to take a lively interest in school affairs. They wished to fill school offices, and as there was no legal warrant they went to the legislature. It amended the law so as to make it read that women should be eligible to any office under the general and special school laws of the state. Thanks to that, various school offices have been filled by women. At the last election the democratic candidate for state superintendent of instruction was a woman.

If the legislature were to say that women should be eligible to the office of justice of the peace it is not likely that its action would be seriously challenged on the ground of unconstitutionality or inexpediency. There are many women who would make better justices of the peace than several of the men who are now serving.

As the legislature has not made women eligible, the natural presumption is that they are not. It takes a positive law to set aside the customary law—or the natural law, as some would call it—which has excluded women from political offices. Last week the voters of Evanston chose as justice of the peace a woman. She has had legal training, and the dignity of the office would not be impaired by her; but the question of her eligibility has yet to be passed on. If she shall be commissioned by the governor, who may think it expedient to consult the attorney general before acting, it is probable that the question of eligibility will be raised by some person who loses his suit in the Evanston court.

CAUGHT AT LAST.

Constantine, the murderer of Mrs. Gentry, is in custody at last. That is something to be thankful for, but if the police department had acted promptly he could have been caught the day the murder was committed. The detectives were notified of the murder early in the morning. They were given a good description of the looks and clothing of the man who was wanted. They knew that he had rushed out into the street bareheaded, and that he would probably go to a hat store first and then to a railroad station. He was a comparative stranger to the city, and, as he had no friends here with whom he could hide, his first thought naturally would be to get out of Chicago. The detectives visited all the hat stores except the one to which Constantine went and they did not watch the depots until it was too late. In less than six hours after the murder Constantine was on his way to New York. He was given a year of freedom by the stupidity of the detectives.

Nor would Constantine ever have been caught if he had not run his neck into the noose. He got out of the country safely, thanks to his family and friends in New York, and all that he had to do to protect himself was to stay away. He seems to have assumed that the atrocious crime he had committed would be forgotten in a year. Unluckily for him the police had not given up the hunt. They were trying to make amends for their negligence.

It is said that Constantine will be here to face a petit jury next week. There should be no delays in his case. Perhaps the trial will throw some light on what has remained a mystery—the motive for the murder. It is true that Constantine says there was no murder. He asserts that Mrs. Gentry suddenly cut her throat in his presence, and that he was so excited he ran away. It is possible to imagine the case of an extremely nervous man running away under such circumstances, although flight is confession, because he thought he might be accused of murder, with no witness to prove his innocence. But the razor with which Mrs. Gentry's throat was cut was Constantine's. He did not pretend to explain how she could have had it. The razor was found after the murder in Constantine's room and not in the one where it was used. Constantine's flight was hurried, but he had time to take the bloody razor back to his own room.

This suicide story is one which few if any will be prepared to believe, although it may have been accepted as true by the people in New York who hid Constantine away and smuggled him out of the country. It remains to be seen what effect the suicide story will have on the jury if Constantine shall rely on that for his defense.

MEDIATION.

A speaker for the railroads asserts that mediation under the Erdmann act proves to be better than arbitration. The distinction is that the mediators have confined themselves to bringing the parties in controversy together, while arbitrators would have made an award binding on both parties, but perhaps unacceptable to both. Whatever the particular form the intervention took the result will be greeted with applause by the whole public.

There was danger that thousands of railway employés would walk out and that tens of thousands of workmen would be obliged to face short hours or a shutdown. The loss to the people of the United States would have been incalculable. The record of the great strikes of 1877 and 1894 shows that apart from the loss of wages and the loss to business there is always danger of wanton destruction of property by mobs whenever a strike is long and bitterly fought and many men are idle.

In coming together the men have yielded some of their contentions and the railways have made greater concessions. The men yielded the point of hours. The La Follette act protects railway employés engaged in interstate commerce, and there is not so much need as there was once for agreements between employers and employed to prevent overwork. On the other hand, the men secure a substantial increase in wages.

A strike would have been so disastrous to shippers that they can afford to be indifferent to the possible effect of the settlement of the dispute. The agreement to raise wages may be a sufficient reason for a failure to reduce freight rates. It may become an excuse for attempting to raise freight rates. The railways are already facing a reduction of passenger rates through the action of different state legislatures, and have raised wages several times in the last few years to meet the increased cost of living. The cost of material has also advanced.

Still, the prospect of continued high or higher rates cannot be as much dreaded by merchants and manufacturers as a general strike would have been. The Erdmann act has proved a substantial benefit to the country, and both railway managers and men have shown good sense in coming to a peaceful agreement through mediation. Probably such an agreement could have been reached in no other way. Both parties to the controversy dreaded a strike, for they knew what an unqualified calamity it would be, and yet they had come to a point where it seemed almost unavoidable. Each had said that it had gone as far as it could in the way of concession and could not honorably yield more. Pride or obstinacy might have made them act up to those declarations if the federal officials had not appeared on the scene.

WASHINGTON'S UNIVERSITY.

The bequest in the will of George Washington towards an endowment for a university to be established at the capital of the nation has been brought to the attention of the public again and again during the more than a hundred years since the first president died. It has been before congress at intervals, has been the subject of many reports to one house or the other, and has had the favor of many prominent men and women.

Just now the subject is again receiving attention because of the activity of the authorities of what was long known as the "Columbian university," an institution which changed its name not long ago to the "George Washington university." Its president, a former Chicago man, now announces that another western man with university experience has been selected to undertake a special canvass of the country with the definite purpose of realizing the ideal which the "father of his country" had in mind.

The project of a national university has not met with favor from the representatives of the leading institutions of learning in the United States. The matter has been discussed in many meetings of the "Association of American Universities," an organization comprising a dozen or more of the big schools, such as Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Columbia, Pennsylvania, Johns Hopkins, and Cornell in the east and Chicago, Michigan, Wisconsin, California, and Leland Stanford in the west. The sentiment has been adverse. This may have been due in part to a desire to limit the number of real universities or it may have come from a feeling that there was no real need for a great institution at the national capital. On the other hand, the persistence of attempts by several denominations to establish well endowed foundations at Washington seems to reflect a popular opinion that the location is an ideal one for the purpose.

When the strength and the activities of such educational forces as the congressional library, the Smithsonian institution, the Carnegie foundation, the national observatory, the coast and geodetic survey, and various other public or semi-public enterprises are considered it is natural for the thought to take shape that a well endowed degree conferring institution of university rank might attract large numbers of advanced students because of the superior advantages afforded by the increasingly intellectual environment of the seat of government. Whatever the outcome of the present movement may be the subject is likely to come up often until Washington has a great school for higher education.

PITTSBURG'S HONEST MEN.

Pittsburg has had hard luck. The escapades of its millionaires and sons of millionaires have made many people think it the home of all that is evil. The publicity which it has attained through the courts has been unfortunate. It is hardly to be wondered at that the chamber of commerce should attempt to arrange a public meeting with the idea of showing another side to the picture. The list of distinguished sons who have attained success and honor as painters, scientists, inventors, theologians, railroad managers, lawyers, manufacturers, musicians, diplomats, and leaders in other walks of life is distinctly creditable to the city. Even more significant is the fact that 600 citizens gathered to show their interest in refuting the charge that Pittsburg is a wicked place because of the misdemeanors of the wealthy few.

There is plenty of sin and crime in every prosperous city. The sordid side of human nature finds its expression there. Where great fortunes are amassed in a comparatively short time it is not unusual to find people who drift from the moorings of honor and integrity if they have not a firm grip on themselves. High living leads to extravagance and wickedness, and scandals follow in their train.

But the man or woman who gets unwelcome publicity because of misdeeds is the exception. The solid, substantial citizens who live their daily lives in quiet paths are the ones who make for real progress. They comprise the great majority. It is a false judgment which overlooks the achievements of an astronomer like Brashear or an inventor like Westinghouse and makes its decisions upon the showing of the divorce courts or the criminal courts. Pittsburg has done well to meet the charge against it. Its elements of real greatness far outnumber the forces that have combined of late to blacken its name.

THE PRIVATE LETTER.

The arrest in New York of a former private stenographer of Mr. Harriman for selling to a newspaper a copy of an important letter dictated to him was made under the provisions of the penal code of that state. In this it is expressly stated that if a person willfully and without authority takes a letter, telegram, or private paper belonging to another, or a copy of the same, and publishes the whole or any part thereof he is guilty of a misdemeanor. The stenographer, in confessing his fault, said that he did not know he was violating the law.

The incident calls renewed attention to the usual fidelity of the ordinary man or woman who is trusted with information of a private character. No one who has a large correspondence is entirely freed from the necessity of dictating to a third party letters whose contents concern only the sender and the receiver. Advice and suggestions of the utmost importance are thus made part of the knowledge of a third individual, and if that person proves untrustworthy disastrous results may come. The danger exists in almost every business where trade secrets may be sold by an unscrupulous employé to the advantage of a competitor and the loss of the employer. A stenographic note book or carbon copies of letters may easily be secreted, provided that the desire for such action is present.

It is to the credit of the clerks and stenographers of the country that so little of this is done. Faith and trust are the corner stones of industry. Where there is an occasional breach of trust, such as that brought to light in the New York case cited, there are hundreds of thousands of instances of absolute fidelity to employers. The great majority of the army of workers are not restrained by the provisions of law. They do not keep the business secrets because it is a misdemeanor to give them out. The New York law is not duplicated in many of the states. The real safety lies in the honesty of human nature, which recognizes a trust when it is imposed and responds quickly to confidence when it is given, even if no caution attends it. The occasional offender against such natural honesty only calls attention to the widespread prevalence of the other and better conception.

MARQUISE DE FONTENOY.

Copyright: 1907: By the Marquise de Fontenoy.

LORD KINNAIRD, who has just been appointed by King Edward to be his lord high commissioner to the annual church assembly at Edinburgh next month, where for a fortnight he will enjoy vice regal honors, holding royal court in the ancient palace of Holyrood, is as noted for his evangelical enthusiasm as he is for his devotion to all athletic sports. He is president of the international council of the Young Men's Christian association, and when he is not holding revival meetings or preaching—having achieved some celebrity in Scotland as a pulpit orator—is engaged in organizing football and cricket matches, "kicking off" in great style in most of the big football matches. He has been president of the National Football Association of England for many years, founded the old Etonians' football club, and in his boyhood days won much college fame as half back. In between times he may be found at the banking houses of either Ransom, Bouverie & Co. or of Barclay & Co., of both of which he is the chairman.

His title is an old one, having been created in 1682 in recognition of the services to the crown of Sir George Kinnaird, who was one of the Lords of Convention of whom Claverhouse spoke and who were distinguished for their loyalty to the Stuart cause. Lord Kinnaird has a grand old place in Perthshire—namely, Rossie Priory, where, when in residence, he preaches each Sunday to a large congregation from the pulpit of his private chapel. Curiously enough Kinnaird castle, in the neighboring county of Forfar, belongs to Lord Southesk, chief of the clan of Carnegie, and now on his way to this country to be the guest of Andrew Carnegie at the inauguration of the Carnegie Institute.

Lord Kinnaird, who is a frequent visitor to America, has likewise a stately town house in St. James square, which for several seasons he placed at the disposal of the late Mr. Gladstone. His eldest son, like the other first born of Scottish viscounts and barons, bears the title of the master. He is a fine, tall young fellow, whose disposition towards philanthropy and evangelism is tempered, as in the case of his father, by his pronounced tastes for everything athletic.

Prince Henry Sayn-Wittgenstein, whose death has just taken place at St. Petersburg at the age of 28, was the only surviving son of Prince Frederick of the same ilk, his elder brother having been killed a few years ago in a duel at St. Petersburg, of which a French demimondaine was the chief cause. Neither the late Prince Henry nor yet his father, who survives him, will be found in those pages of part II. of the Almanach de Gotha that are devoted to the mediatized or formerly sovereign houses of Germany and among which are comprised the Sayn-Wittgensteins. The fact of the matter is that Prince Frederick, though a most amusing man of the world, became involved in so many unsavory scrapes in Germany that his father in conjunction with the other adult members of the family deprived him of all his rights and prerogatives as eldest son and as heir to the family honors. He was ultimately debarred from the use of the name and title of a Prince Sayn-Wittgenstein, and reduced from the rank of a mediatized prince to that of a mere noble with a title of Count Altenkirchen.

Amongst his most sensational freaks was a trip to China, whither he was sent by way of exile and punishment for his shortcomings and where he availed himself of the absence of the German envoy at Peking to pass himself off there as a prince of the reigning house of Prussia, being received in that capacity with royal honors by the Chinese government and imperial court. The German envoy receiving an intimation of what was going on hastened back to Peking and as he arrived Prince Frederick discreetly vanished from the scene and hastily left China.

Then, too, the prince married at Berlin one of the lovely daughters of the Banker Lilienthal, one of whom was the wife of the Belgian envoy, Baron Northomb. After living with her two years he became tired of her and discarded her, securing a dissolution of the marriage on the ground that being a captain of Prussian cavalry he had failed to obtain the consent of the commander of his regiment, which is indispensable to the validity of marriages contracted by officers and soldiers. His two children in consequence thereof were rendered illegitimate and their fate excited so much sympathy in high quarters that they were ennobled with the name of "Von Falkenberg," while their father was sentenced to a term of military imprisonment for having conducted himself in the matter without due regard to the laws of honor, governing the conduct of officers of the German army.

His brother, Prince Louis, who had married another of the Lilienthal sisters, and who was a most chivalrous, high principled gentleman, passionately devoted to his wife, died suddenly at Rome, bequeathing to her all his possessions by will. Prince Frederick, her brother-in-law, however, originated a movement among the members of the family whereby the will of Louis was set aside on the ground that being of bourgeois birth Amelie Lilienthal could not have married Louis on a footing of equality or otherwise than morganatically and consequently that she had none of the rights and prerogatives of a widow of a prince of the house. Not only was she prevented from inheriting a single atom of his property and debarred from the use of his name and title but she even found it impossible to recover the handsome dower which she had received from her father on her marriage. Her treatment excited much popular indignation, the more so as she had been presented at a number of German and foreign courts with her husband as full fledged Princess Sayn-Wittgenstein and was made the subject of a number of sensational lawsuits, which were decided against her. Today she is the wife of Baron Hans de Reischach, whose brother is grand master of the horse to the kaiser.

It was, however, Prince Frederick's marriage to an actress of the name of Wilhelmine Hagen which, in conjunction with some unsavory episodes, finally drove Prince Frederick out of the German army and out of the ranks of his family and reduced him to the status of a Count Altenkirchen. For a time he vegetated as such in Berlin. But finding that many of his former friends and relatives turned their backs upon him, he betook himself to Russia with his actress wife, secured letters of naturalization as a Muscovite citizen, and ultimately managed to induce the czar to bestow upon him the Russian title of Prince Sayn-Wittgenstein of which he had been deprived in Germany, and to the compulsory surrender of which he had given his written consent at Berlin. That is why he figures as a Russian among the mere nobles of part III. of the Almanach de Gotha and not among the other Sayn-Wittgensteins in part II., devoted to the mediatized houses of Germany. His actress wife is, of course, a full fledged Russian princess. The prince is a brother of the late Princess Clovis Hohenlohe, wife of the chancellor of the German empire, the publication of whose memoirs created so great a sensation last year.

Young Prince Henry's wife, now his widow, was formerly a maid of honor to the czarina and a daughter of Dimitri Nabakoff, who was minister of justice under Czar Alexander II. His elder brother, the one killed in a duel by Prince Anatole Bariatinski, bore the name of Alexander, and it is only fair to add that he was quite unacquainted with the demimondaine for whose sake he lost his life. The woman had been making fun in a railroad carriage of the appearance of Prince Bariatinski, who was a perfect stranger to her, and had wound up by inquiring what nationality he belonged to. He replied that he was Russian, but declined to believe her assertion that she was a Parisian, saying that Parisiennes had the reputation of being better bred and more courteous in their behavior. The woman alighted at the next station, insisted that she had been grossly insulted, and seeing a young officer in uniform—namely Alexander Wittgenstein, appealed to him for protection. His intervention in her behalf was, of course, resented by Prince Bariatinski and the fatal duel ensued.

NEWS OF THE THEATERS.

Thomas Orchestra.

The patrons of the Thomas orchestra paid willing and hearty tribute to Sir Edward Elgar yesterday afternoon in Orchestra hall. The eminent English composer had been engaged by the Orchestral association to conduct the latter half of the program, and when he appeared after the intermission he was greeted with applause which compelled him to turn twice and bow his acknowledgments. Three of his compositions—"In the South" overture, his "Variations," and the first of his military marches, "Pomp and Circumstance"—were played under his direction, and after each of them there was again expression of enthusiastic approval and sincere good will. When the last number was ended the orchestra sounded a fanfare, and the audience remained applauding until Sir Edward had returned a second time to the center of the stage and bowed. It was an unusually spontaneous and hearty tribute to a man who has come to loom large in the musical world of today and in whom American music lovers take a kind of quasi-national pride. His being English seems to make him a little more one of our own than are the composers of other nations.

Sir Edward came forward with nothing of the "prima donna conductor" in his manner. There was a positive suggestion of shyness about his bearing both then and whenever he turned to bow to the applauding audience. A man tall and slender, he walks with the slight stoop that tells of the student. He is about middle age, his hair and mustache just beginning to be tinged with gray, his features strong and clear cut, and his eye telling of a nature at once kindly, modest, and sincere, but strong. The impression made by his personality is that of a man who is genuine, who underestimates himself and his abilities rather than overestimates them. There was nothing of egotism or parade about anything he did yesterday. The work was there to be done and he did it. If the auditors were pleased he was gratified and appreciative of their kindness to him. Rarely has a musical lion impressed as so modest as did he yesterday. And yet there was nothing of weakness or servility about his attitude.

As for his conducting, it is not that of a director born to command. Excellent musician and composer that he is, Sir Edward Elgar is not a great conductor. His beat is the long straight beat of the British bandmaster and it frequently is indefinite and unsteady. He stands with feet well apart and with body noticeably bent at the hips, and there is little of grace or flexibility about his leading. He cannot be called awkward, but there is not about his work those qualities which tell of the born conductor.

The men of the orchestra gave him their closest attention and heartiest sympathy yesterday, and the result was performance of the three compositions which was technically and tonally of highest worth. Sir Edward himself seemed genuinely pleased and his assertion after the concert that the "work of the orchestra surpassed all his fondest expectations" evidently was the expression of his true feeling.

As for the reading of the works, it differed from those to which we have been accustomed in that the tempo of both the Overture and the Variations was distinctly slower. There was not a dragging of the speed, but all was played with more deliberation and more of breadth. The result was something of gain in the Variations for they acquired thereby more of clarity and each one of them took on increase of individual character and meaning. The Overture, however, suffered through the slow tempo in that the work impressed with its extreme length—an impression which is lessened even if not wholly avoided when a shade brisker speed is employed. The March was given with a spirit and animation which made it truly stunning. This was, so far as effect was concerned, the high point of Sir Edward's work of the afternoon, and it roused the audience to genuine enthusiasm.

The first half of the program which was under Mr. Stock's leadership was made up entirely of the work of "living composers." It included the "Wallenstein's Camp" from D'Indy's "Wallenstein" Trilogy, Glazounow's "musical picture" "Spring," an orchestral fantasy by Converse called "The Mystic Trumpeter," and the "Love Scene" from Richard Strauss' opera, "Fire Famine"—picture music, all of it. The Converse composition was a complete novelty. It consists of an endeavor to translate into tonal idiom the emotions voiced in the Walt Whitman poem, "The Mystic Trumpeter." The young American has omitted the fourth stanza of the poem from his musical scheme, but each of the other five stanzas he has taken as a sort of "motto" for a corresponding number of short tonal pictures of the moods they express. The first is the peace found in nature; the second, the love that enfolds and vivifies all; the third the turmoil of war and wreck; the fourth the depression felt at the contemplation of humanity's wrongs and bondage; and the fifth a pean of joy. The poem is one suited to translation into music as such subjects go, and Mr. Converse has accomplished much that compels approval and admiration. His musical thoughts are not especially significant as far as the thematic materials themselves are concerned, but his command of the colors of the orchestral palette is great, and he secures instrumental colorings that are of marked beauty and effectiveness. The most original and most telling portions of the composition are the "introductions" to the various sections. In each of these the suggestion of the mystical quality of the "trumpeter" whom the poet heard is remarkably obtained. Especially the opening of the work is strikingly beautiful and masterly.

The Glazounow "Spring" has been heard here twice before. It is a pleasing bit of tonal painting and was exquisitely played yesterday. The "Wallenstein" was given with brilliancy, and the excerpt from Mr. Strauss' unpleasant opera was made effective more through the manner in which it was performed than through any vast musical thoughts it contains or emotional message it voices.

The same program will be given tonight, commencing at 8:15 o'clock.

PREVENTION OF MINING FRAUDS.

[From Mines and Minerals.]

Promoters are of endless variety, but the man with a straightforward proposition is the only one that need be considered—the others can take care of themselves—and for his protection and that of his clients legal steps should be taken.

Let the legislature of each mining state enact necessary legislation which shall compel any corporation (mining or otherwise) which proposes to sell its stock to the public to file with the proper officer a sworn statement of the general facts relative to the company and its property, with a certified copy of its prospectus and a signed original report by a qualified mining engineer (in mining corporations), all fully protected by proper penalties for misrepresentation.

Let the legislature of each state where stocks of any sort are offered for sale require that all such companies be registered with the proper officer before being offered for sale, and that none be accepted for registration unless proper filing has been made as provided in the state where the mine or property is situated, with a heavy penalty for the sale of stock of unregistered companies. Such a condition may be a long way ahead, but it would put a stop to wildcatting in mining and all other stocks, would give the miner a chance to make his mine productive and a benefit to the state, and give the small investor an opportunity to buy a real chance in a real mine instead of throwing his money away.

There is usually enough risk in any prospect or new venture into the unknown to satisfy the desire to speculate without adding the natural propensities of the faker to the load that the new venture must carry until the dividend period is reached.

Railway Death Roll.

In the nineteen years since the interstate commerce commission began the collection of facts about accidents, nearly 6,000 passengers, over 48,000 employés, and nearly 90,000 other persons have been killed on American railways, and nearly 1,000,000 more have been crippled or maimed, scalded or crushed, disfigured or invalided; and we still make no protest. For a country that has pride in itself and its "progress," this seems to me a humiliating situation. But the still more humiliating fact is that conditions grow worse year by year.

In 1905 it was twice as dangerous to travel on a railway train or to work for a railway company in the United States as it was in 1895.—Everybody's Magazine.

AMONG THE NEW BOOKS.

JOSEPH M'CABE WRITES A MOST ENTHUSIASTIC BIOGRAPHY OF TALLEYRAND.

He Finds the Statesman Generous, Humane, a Lover of Peace, and Innocent of the D'Enghien Affair. "The Real Louis XV."

TALLEYRAND, the man of wit, satire, politeness, social amiability, and consummate adroitness in affairs both large and small, has an enthusiastic biographer in Mr. Joseph McCabe (D. Appleton & Co.). In this book Mr. McCabe has undertaken his third study of the sons of Mother Church, the two previous being Abelard and St. Augustine. He is not one of those modern biographers who succeed in maintaining feelings of indifference toward the subject of their biographical impetus. As he was an advocate for St. Augustine, that man with a genius for the simple, so he succeeds in holding a brief for Talleyrand, the most complex and enigmatic of statesmen. He finds him affectionate, good natured, generous, humane, a lover of peace and order, guiltless of treachery—save in one extraordinary instance—and innocent of the murder of the duc d'Enghien.

He does not even accuse him of selfishness when he at length refused to be drawn to ruin with Napoleon. Napoleon had ceased to heed his counsel. He begged the emperor to give over his ambitions of world supremacy, and to become "king of France"—advice too moderate for the swollen egotism of one who, seeing much, could by no possibility see Elba, Waterloo, or St. Helena.

It may be that all readers of Mr. McCabe's copious history will not be convinced of the magnanimity, reliability, and largeness of spirit of Talleyrand, but they will at least be bewitched with the depiction of this perfumed knight, who never limps upon a scene that he does not command the attention of his audience, who cannot remain without electrifying it, nor depart without leaving behind him a theme for conversation. When there was circulated a rumor that George III. had passed to his Hanoverian fathers, a foreign minister called on Talleyrand to ask his opinion. "Well, some say he is dead and some say he is not," said the minister of foreign affairs. "I may tell you in confidence that I don't believe either." When an Englishman of plain features was boring almost to extinction a company with a recital of the charms of his mother, Talleyrand broke in with: "It must have been your father, then, who was not good looking." Once a person took the liberty of asking him what had passed at the council. "Three hours," said Talleyrand, yawning. A friend of reckless life met him and complained of suffering from an indigestion "the pains of hell." "What, already?" cried Talleyrand.

It is the recountal of the development of his character, those chagrins and subtle revenges, those friendships which were half hates, those boldnesses which covered timidities, that wisdom which was purely politic, in which the interest of the book lies. Life, in which other men dully worked, was a playground for this satirist. He had a little intellectual Olympus in which he felt justified in abiding, watching with the eyes of a careless god the struggles, follies, and excesses of other men. He met trying events with the most intellectual forms of bravado. When it was suggested to him, after the scandal of d'Enghien, that he resign from the ministry, he said: "Because Napoleon has committed a crime, is that any reason why I should be guilty of a blunder?" It would seem, if Napoleon was the scourge of Europe, that Talleyrand was the rapier of France. He could not even give a piece of state advice heavily or with dullness. "Kill each other or embrace!" he begged certain provincial contestants in the days of the revolutionary risings. He was consulted by the greatest, and he rushed brilliantly to conclusions over which they labored; but it seems even at this date as if the conclusions of other statesmen, attained by severe labor, had about them a quality of sincerity which were lacking in these swift judgments of Talleyrand, who might be right, but who would not have minded if he had been brilliant and wrong.

He lived to be 84, and he purchased a churchly burial by a sort of recantation of many rebellious acts and utterances. There was a tradition to the effect that, when his body lay in the hearse, and the driver called out the usual question, "What barrier?" a deep voice from underneath the hearse replied: "La barrière de l'enfer."

"Well, it is well enough to pass judgment upon this man whose intellect surpassed that of the master he served—that master of masters, who would be served even by kingdoms—it is easy to condemn his vicious tongue, his circuitous actions, his terrible secrecy; but which of us would not journey far and fasting to be put in the Paris of the '80s, when Talleyrand sat daily among the most brilliant talkers of the town and held them spellbound with his wit, his sallies, and his theories? Life was for him a sort of background to the salon, the court, and the council. He had the brightness of the meteor, but the durability of a star When he went out the beams shot from his wonderful personality continued long to dazzle men. Indeed, they have not yet ceased to do so. Mr. McCabe is to be congratulated upon having transferred to paper so vivid an impression of this amazing man.

It is Appleton's, also, who publish Lieut. Col. Andrew Haggard's "THE REAL LOUIS XV." This book follows his "Side Lights on the Court of France," his "Louis XIV. in Court and Camp," and his "Regent of Roués." It is not apparent to a casual reader that the author has shed any new light upon the character of the pleasure mad king, whose urbanity was held to be sufficient compensation for any insult he might inflict. But the picture of the abject court, of the fawning mistresses, of the king whose arrogance reached to heaven is well drawn.

Necessarily, the depiction of the character of Mme. Pompadour plays a large part in the book, and never has her assiduity, her powers of domination, her zest for life—life in its most emphasized aspects—been more engagingly or consistently chronicled.

What extraordinary human beings circled around her and her royal slave! Voltaire, Diderot, Montesquieu, d'Alembert, Saint-Germain, d'Eon, Richelieu, Rousseau—egotists all. They require the vivacious touch if they are to be truly presented, and Haggard has that, though he can give due importance to a subject and be as grave as the best—or the worst—of historians when the need arises.

To be sure, there is a limit to the amount of time one wishes to devote to the contemplation of this profligate monarch and his succession of mistresses. One marvels at the utter concentration upon themselves of which they were capable. Disinterestedness, patriotism, public interest, benevolence seem out of their comprehension. The world is interesting merely as related to themselves. This destructive selfishness of theirs, put in contrast with Napoleon's constructive and intelligent selfishness, makes him tower above them like a catheral above a chapel.

The portraits of the personages who play their part in the books add greatly to the interest.

ROLLO OGDEN'S LIFE OF GODKIN REALLY A HISTORY OF OUR TIMES.

Intimate Letters Written by the Late Editor of the Nation Give Pictures of Men and Events as He Saw Them.

THE "LIFE AND LETTERS OF EDWIN LAWRENCE GODKIN," edited by Rollo Ogden (Macmillan), is more than the life of Mr. Godkin; it is a political and social history of his time, which is our time. Mr. Godkin held a unique position in this country. He was the editor of two journals, the Nation first, the Evening Post later—whose combined circulation hardly counted, as circulations go, but for influence during his editorship outweighed any weekly or daily published in New York. Mr. Godkin was a man of strong and original personality. He might infuriate you; you might register a vow to stop your subscription to the Evening Post, but you would not do it. His editorials at times irritated one to the limit of patience, but at the same time one admired and respected the spirit behind them. It was said by some one, I do not know positively who—Mr. Choate has been accused—that a New Yorker hardly knew what to do, with the Sun making vice attractive in the morning, and the Post making virtue odious in the evening. This is one of the epigrams that are only half truth, but it amused the readers of both papers immensely. Mr. Godkin was popularly supposed to be very brusque and ill mannered. He was only brusque with his pen. Mr. Godkin, as every one knows, was an Irishman by birth, but English by training. His nationality was often held against him, for what reason I cannot imagine, as so many good Americans are foreign born. But in this book he speaks as though his birth were an objection to him as an editorial writer.

Mr. Rollo Ogden, who is Mr. Godkin's successor as editor of the Evening Post, is to be complimented on what he has accomplished in this "Life," and the way he has accomplished it. I should imagine that Mr. Godkin would be pleased if he knew with how much taste and discretion and genuine appreciation his associate of many years has done his task, if one may describe a labor of love as a task. Mr. Ogden has given us scores of Mr. Godkin's letters, not always saying to whom they were addressed, by the way; and in these, of course, lies the great interest of the book. Mr. Godkin was as outspoken in his editorials, but his style was naturally not so intimate as in his letters. I am amused by a reference in a letter written in 1858 to the fact that Edward Everett had been induced to write for the New York Ledger. In the light of present day temptation to authors, one cannot but smile:

> The proprietor was four or five years ago a journeyman printer, but by lavish use of puffery in aid of this periodical has amassed a large fortune, a la Barnum. He wrote to Edward Everett a few days ago offering to pay over to the Ladies' Mount Vernon association in aid of the purchase of the house and tomb of Washington—a project in which Mr. Everett is greatly interested—the sum of $10,000 in case the latter would undertake to write one article in the Ledger every week for one year. To the astonishment of the whole union the ex-ambassador, ex-secretary of state, ex-president of Harvard university, ex-editor of the Greek Reader, the scholar, the exquisite, the aristocrat of "the universal Yankee nation," has accepted the proposal, the money has been paid over, and he begins a series of contributions, to be entitled the "Mount Vernon Papers," in a few weeks, and Bonner, the proprietor of the publication, will, no doubt, shortly fill the whole sides of the newspapers with announcements of the fact.

In a letter written from Paris in 1862 Mr. Godkin writes to his friend, Charles L. Brace:

> The southerners have beaten us hollow in the management of public opinion on this side of the water. You know how much more of the work of diplomacy is done in social intercourse than by note writing; and yet no member of our legation here speaks one word of French. Dayton goes to see Thouvenel with a hired interpreter! And the story goes that the interpreter sells the conversations to the southern commissioners. I don't vouch for this, but it's funny. The secretary of legation is a common, New Jersey horse jockey, who can't speak English decently. As to French, I am told he and his teachers both despair.

Lincoln's conquest of Godkin, Mr. Ogden tells us, as of the country and universal fame, was gradual. At first he was repelled by the president's "down at heel manners," and in this he was not unlike many of Lincoln's countrymen. But this impression was not a lasting one, and in the end he was one of Lincoln's greatest admirers. Speaking of the attacks on Lincoln, Mr. Godkin says:

> The opposition press in this country has, of course, not spared him either, though I do not remember to have seen many things in its columns which could be said to surpass in sheer brutality much that has been written about him in London. And yet I have never heard of his uttering or writing one word to show that these shameless attacks ever roused in him a single angry impulse. How many men of high breeding and culture are there who could pass through a similar ordeal with as much credit?

Mr. Godkin admired George William Curtis immensely as a scholar and gentleman, but not so much as a politician or an office holder!

> His mind does not raise political ideas in the open air. They all grow under glass, and are feeble when exposed. He is by temperament and training a literary man, and has not, I think, enough combativeness, or rather the tenacity and distinct consciousness of what he wants, of which combativeness is so often the expression, to be be put in a difficult post. I say all this with the strongest liking and admiration of him, and I would not say it to any one who did not know and like him as well as you do.

Of Sumner he says:

> Did you see poor Sumner's last "bill" and "resolutions"? What a pitiable spectacle! Was there ever anything in the man, and if so, what has become of it? I felt so grateful to Fessenden, ungentlemanly though he was, for sticking his pin into the bladder. How long shall we have to treat such people with tenderness and respect!

Of Howells and Harte, who appeared on the eastern horizon at about the same time, Mr. Godkin writes to Charles Eliot Norton:

> Howells has just breakfasted with us, and is gone, as sweet and gentle and winning in all ways as ever. He succeeds to the Atlantic Monthly in August, vice Fields, who retires into private life. Fields and Osgood have had a valuable reinforcement within the last month in the person of Bret Harte, who has come from San Francisco, and is our latest literary sensation. I suppose you have read his sketches of California life which appeared in the Overland Monthly, and which showed real genius.

When Godkin first met Lowell he did not like him. He thought him rather affected and apt to pose; but when he knew him better he admired him, as did every one who knew him well, and could no longer see affectation or pose in him. As time went on, Godkin and Lowell became close friends. Lowell writes to Godkin in 1871:

> You are the only man I know who carries his head perfectly steady, and I find myself so thoroughly agreeing with the Nation always that I am half persuaded I edit it myself! Or rather you always say what I would have said—if I had only thought of it.

There are a number of Lowell's letters to Godkin printed in these two volumes, and they are delightful reading.

BUSINESS IN FINE SHAPE.

AVERTING OF RAILROAD STRIKE PLEASES COMMERCIAL MEN.

Spring Trade Shows Heavy Advance in the Leading Branches, and the Remarkable Volume of New Demands, According to Dun & Co., Reflects Continued Strength in the Buying Power—Increased Factory Production.

In its weekly review of Chicago trade Dun's Review, published by R. G. Dun & Co., will say:

"In conceding higher wages to train men and averting a possible serious tieup of freight the managers of western roads have brought relief to business interests which would otherwise have been adversely affected.

"Spring trade shows steady advance in the leading branches and the remarkable volume of new demands reflects continued strength in buying power. Factory production, wholesaling, and forwarding of finished products and general merchandise exceed those of a year ago.

"Railroad earnings continue to reflect steady expansion in tonnage and much new track work and other improvements are now well started at various western points.

"Failures reported in the Chicago district numbered 13, against 22 last week and 22 a year ago. For the first quarter of this year the similar failures totaled 296, against 339 in 1906 and 360 in 1905.

"Bank clearings, $233,776,345, exceed those of corresponding week in 1906 by 15.8 per cent."

Trade in Nation at Large.

New York, April 5.—R. G. Duns & Co.'s weekly review of trade tomorrow will say:

"Trade responds to seasonable weather, distribution of spring merchandise fully equaling sanguine expectations, and country merchants purchase liberally from wholesalers at leading centers. Reports from principal cities are uniformly favorable, active business being accompanied by further improvement in collections.

"Leading industries are fully occupied, and no strikes of more than local significance have materialized thus far. Manufacturers are busy on goods for early shipment, and sample business for later seasons promises continued activity. Improved traffic conditions make deliveries more prompt.

"Few lines of finished steel can be delivered promptly, mills averaging four to six months' capacity engaged, and quotations are consequently well maintained.

"Primary markets for textiles are more quiet, but there is no diminution in the output of mills."

As Seen by Bradstreet's.

Bradstreet's tomorrow will say:

"All reports as to trade at wholesale and in jobbing circles in the first quarter are in a high degree favorable, and failure returns confirm the smallest number of casualties for a generation past. Reports from most leading industries are still of full order books and of backward deliveries. There is, however, slightly more manifest a disposition to move more conservatively as regards distant positions, some easing of metal quotations, and a softening of asking prices for various products, and the jewelry, shoe, leather, and wool trades note quiet, pending a clearer view of later developments. In the dry goods trade there has been something like a lull in jobbing lines, now that the first rush of spring demand is over, and the course of retail trade will be closely watched."

Bank Clearings for Week.

Bradstreet's bank clearings report for the week ending April 4 shows an aggregate of $3,066,411,000, as against $3,063,262,000 last week and $3,134,603,000 in the corresponding week last year. Canadian clearings for the week total $64,226,000, as against $25,352,000 last week and $71,493,000 in the same week last year The following is a list of the cities:

Child Smothered in Folding Bed.

Florence Davidson, 3 years old, 1460 Wabash avenue, was smothered in a folding bed yesterday. The mother, Mrs. D. F. Davidson, had left the child sleeping, and when she returned at 10:30 o'clock she found the bed had closed itself with the child inside.

The Truce in the East and Its Aftermath

By the Author of "The Re-Shaping of the Far East," etc.

Cloth, 8vo, with illustrations and map, $3.50 net.

MR. WEALE'S book on the conditions in Manchuria just before the Russo-Japanese War is, according to the London Daily News, "so far superior to all other books on the Russian rule in Manchuria that it may be considered really the only one." He has lost none of his power of thoroughly interesting the reader, while supplying information of the greatest importance to students of Far Eastern Politics. His lively, picturesque narrative discusses the new position of Japan, its promise and its menace; the present and the future of China; and the ways in which the great Powers have been affected by the results of the war.

VICTORY TO CUBS IN FRIGID GAME.

COUNT OF BATTLE 4 TO 1.

Overall Holds Indianapolis to 4 Hits, While Chicagoans Slam Pitchers for 9.

BY SY.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 5.—[Special.]—The Cubs resumed their natural gait here today and won the championships of the American association and North Pole leagues again by beating the Indianapolis outfit by a score of 4 to 1 in a contest played between blasts of icy winds straight from the lair of Boreas.

It was the last day of the preliminary season in which the whole team will be together, and Manager Chance put a veteran team into action for the purpose of showing the youngsters how to perform championship stunts in Chicago with the wind blowing sixty miles an hour straight out of the straits of Mackinac. Despite the conditions the regulars did not fail their manager.

Overall, whose turn it was to do slab duty, kept the Hoosiers in submission all afternoon with nothing but a straight fast ball. It was too cold for curves. Orvie was afraid the curves or his arm would break off in the middle like an icicle if he tried to bend anything, so he shot the ball straight over the middle and corners of the plate for nine innings, using nothing but a change of pace to deceive the batsmen.

Only Four Hits Off Overall.

The Hoosiers responded to this heroic treatment by getting a total of four hits in nine rounds, while eight of them retired on clean cut whiffs. Save in the second inning, when "Big Jeff" allowed two of the four safeties to get together, Watkins' men were absolutely helpless, although they had the assistance of a pair of boots pulled off by Hofman and Evers.

While Overall was performing these cracked ice stunts the Cubs banged the ball just hard enough to cinch the victory. Nine times they found Hoosier hurlers for good things and in four innings put comrades over the plate. Schulte, Chance, and Steinfeldt shone in the swat work with two apiece and the manager was robbed of a third hit by a lucky one-handed stab of Himes which easily was exhibit 9 in the defensive work.

A pass to Sheckard sprouted Chicago's first run in the inaugural. Jimmy stole second and registered on Schulte's hit and Chance's fly. Two baggers by Carr and Hopke got next to each other in the second and tied up the score. But in the third Chance singled with two out and broke the tie when Steinfeldt smashed a corking double past third. In the fifth Schulte opened with a stinger which his "charley horse" leg kept down to a two bagger and he limped home on Chance's bunt and Steinfeldt's single.

Himes in Hard Luck.

The Cubs' final tally happened in the eighth, when Hofman ambled because Burwell could not locate the plate. Evers sacrificed and Moran singled. Himes, the ex-St. Louis cardinal, gave the 200 frozen maniacs who shivered through the exhibition a chance to warm their lungs in the ninth. He threatened to start something with a vehement smash over Slagle's head for three corners. There was nobody out, but this leader of forlorn hope slowly congealed on third base, despairingly watching Overall nail three men in a row down on a pop fly and two strike outs. The Californian used three curve balls during the game, and all three were accidents due to his foot slipping.

The Cubs started a kidding match with Manager Chance today in which the latter came out on top. Chance was the last man dressed, for a wonder, and the Cubs drove to the grounds in carriages without him. Chance had to ride out in an open street car, but said never a word until he reached Watkins' plant. Then he hunted up the Jehus who drove the carriages out and told them to drive back to the city, as they would not be wanted.

Joke Is on the Cubs.

When the Cubs raced out after the game looking for the comfortable closed carriages in which they had come out there were none in sight, and they were confronted with the necessity of walking back to the city, as practically none of them had carfare in his uniform pockets. Chance boarded the first car and disappeared cityward grinning his appreciation of the Cubs' fix. After considerable wait some one discovered Trainer McCormick, who confessed to having a dollar in his pocket, and out of the greatness of his Celtic heart Jack paid the car fare for the bunch. Hereafter it is expected the carriages will wait for the manager when he is a trifle late. The Cubs were given a two hours' workout in the forenoon despite the chilling weather to make up for the lack of practice yesterday at Springfield.

Watkins Is Obstinate.

A sudden and complete change in the Cubs' plans was made necessary late tonight by the refusal of Owner Watkins of the Indianapolis club to stand for a plan to leave the second team here for tomorrow's game. Watkins managed to get hold of President Murphy by long distance phone and gave him the earache he had been pouring into Manager Chance's ears. The result was an eleventh hour switch and the regulars remained here for tomorrow's game, as originally contracted last winter, and the Zeephos left to play the Springfield Three Eyes leaguers tomorrow.

This will necessitate a long jump for the second team from Springfield, Ill., to Dayton to fill the Sunday engagement. Tomorrow night, instead of tonight, the regulars will jump to Springfield, Ill., for a Sunday game and then to Champaign for Monday and Tuesday.

Second Team to Play at Toledo.

The second squad will go to Toledo after all, as President Armour has repented of his action in canceling the games of Monday and Tuesday. Frank Schulte left for Chicago tonight to consult Dr. Harley Parker about his "Charley" horse. Today's score:

PHILLIES TAKE ANOTHER GAME.

Outplay the Athletics and Win by a Score of 7 to 2—Vickers Is Batted Sharply.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 5.—[Special.]—The Phillies duplicated their performance of the previous two days by taking the Athletics into camp this afternoon by a score of 7 to 2. Never during the game were the Athletics able to master Sparks' delivery, and the Phillies had little trouble with mighty "Rube" Vickers, Mack's great right handed pitching find, although the support given the latter was none too good. Sparks kept the nine hits made off him well scattered. Score:

TIMELY HIT BY BECKLEY.

VETERAN HELPS CARDINALS DEFEAT BROWNS AT ST. LOUIS.

Drives In Winning Run in Ninth Intercity Struggle, Laying Down One That Howell and Delehanty Missed Connections On—Battle Is Seesaw Affair Which Takes Last Inning to Decide — Stevens' Errors Prove Costly for His Team.

St. Louis, Mo., April 5.—[Special.]—Old Jake Beckley, hero of many a hard fought baseball battle, beat the Browns with a timely hit in the last half of the ninth inning this afternoon. The score was 5 to 4.

Catcher Stevens of the Browns practically gave the Cardinals two runs, once in the sixth, when he muffed Holly's foul. He redeemed himself before and after the misplay by driving in three runs, but credit for winning must be given the veteran, Beckley.

Howell brought about his own downfall in the last half of the ninth when he walked Karger and booted Kelly's bunt. O'Hara then fanned and Bennett forced Kelly at second, but in the mixup Karger made third and it was up to Beckley to drive in the winning run.

Jake was there in the crisis in statesmanlike form. He laid down a sharp one that Howell and Delehanty fell over each other trying to field, and Karger romped in from third with the winning run.

The game was one of those seesaw affairs that have the spectators on tip toe throughout. The Browns were first to score in their half. Stevens broke up things for the Browns in the sixth, but evened up for the misplay by smashing a drive to center in the ninth that tied the count. Score:

SHUT OUT WHITE SOX SECONDS.

Rourke's Ball Players Defeat Chicagoans in Omaha Game by Score of One to Nothing.

Omaha, Neb., April 5.—[Special.]—Comiskey's White Sox seconds were taken into camp today by "Pa" Rourke's bunch at the tune of 1 to 0. The matinee lasted only for six and a half innings, which took up but fifty minutes. The thermometer stood at 40 above, and 700 patient fans shivered through the show.

Before the regularly scheduled game began the Sox played five innings with Creighton university, which the Sox won by a score of 3 to 1.

Rourke put in two of his best wigglers, and they held the Sox down to one lonely hit, which Cheney secured in the sixth inning. An error by Belden in the same inning gave the visitors the only opportunity they had to score, but O'Neill fouled out and Welday sent a little one to short.

Cheney was a trifle wild at times, but held the Rourkes to two hits, neither of which figured in the score. In the second inning Cheney smashed Dolan in the shoulder and Graham in the back in succession. Townsend sent a hot one to Quillin and he fired it across to Patterson, who could not jump high enough to get it, and Dolan scored before the ball got back to the diamond. And that was all the scoring. The Sox received much applause, most of them being well known in Omaha. Score:

MAROON FRESHMEN WIN A GAME

First Year Students Defeat Wendell Phillips, 5 to 4—Extra Inning Required to Settle Battle.

University of Chicago freshmen defeated the Wendell Phillips High school nine in their first game of the season at Marshall field by a score of 5 to 4. An extra inning was required, the university men, by bunching hits, sending two men across the plate.

Both teams showed pepper in their work, especially on the bases. Coach Baird used sixteen of his squad in the freshmen lineup, three of them being in the box. Slater, Latham, and Preston were in good form. Wendell Phillips also tried out three men. Groves did the best work of the trio, but Lindquist and Leve were effective. Score:

GIANTS FINISH LONG TRIP.

National Leaguers, in Best of Condition, Reach New York—Play Yale Team Today.

New York, April 5.—Brown as berries and looking in the best of condition, John McGraw and his National league baseball team arrived in town today and went right up to the polo grounds for an hour of practice. The team just completed the long journey to Los Angeles, where it got into playing condition for the coming season. Following today's practice the manager declared he was well satisfied with the condition of all his players and expressed confidence that they would go into the first regular game of the season next Thursday in championship form. The opening game will be with the Philadelphia club at the polo grounds. After a two hours' practice tomorrow the team will play Yale.

DUFFY FOR BOSTON MANAGER?

Providence Magnate, It Is Said, May Become Leader of the American League Club.

Boston, Mass., April 5.—[Special.]—Now that George Huff, athletic director at Illinois university, has declined to manage the Boston Americans, it is likely President Taylor will hurry to the Hub and procure a local man to take charge of the club, as he originally intended. It is said Hugh McBreen, treasurer of the club, has had a conference with Hugh Duffy, now manager and part owner of the Providence team, and that the latter will accept the berth as manager if given a contract for two or three years. The Boston fans have great confidence in the ability of Duffy.

BALL TEAMS IDLE IN CINCINNATI.

White Sox Take Advantage of Open Date in Their Pork and Beans Schedule.

HOBNOB WITH SENATORS.

Day Is Spent in Talking Oil Wells; White Turns Barker for a Dealer in Hats.

BY CHARLES DRYDEN.

Cincinnati, O., April 5.—[Special.]—An open date in the pork and bean schedule gave the Sox a chance to rest their hands and feet and exchange a few timely words with the Washington demons about the perils and tribulations of the 15 cent and 25 cent circuit. The two teams reached this mud soaked city this morning and tied up at the Grand hotel.

Ever mindful of the ethics of the profesh, Mr. J. Cantillon invited the champions out to see his men vs. the reds in the afternoon. But the sky was the color of the goo that smeared the ball yard and as the advance sale was light, the magnates called the game off after the bus had backed up to the hotel door.

Washingtonians Look Natural.

The Nationals came downstairs in their spangles and stood round a while for the Sox to admire them. There was little change in the aspect of the veterans except that the warped legs of Lave Cross are bowed worse than ever. A few more years at third base will make his hoop complete. When the grand old man has finished as an infielder he can take up pitching. Lave has a couple of the greatest natural out curves ever shown by an athlete.

Breezy Mike Regan of Boston blew in to greet the players and wish Jones and Cantillon all kinds of success. The Boston bug is here to look things over and hitch his legs under the table at the Hermann-Comiskey eating tournament tomorrow night. Regan is said to be the double distilled essence of all the wind that ever blew into Boston harbor—and that is some wind. His first blast of joyful greeting jarred the hats off the startled athletes and blinked 1,800 incandescent lamps in various parts of the hotel.

Cantillon Is Mustacheless.

Mr. Cantillon has changed much since the beginning of the spring trip. The jet black mustache that made Joseph look like the popular Italian barber on the rear page of the Pink Gazette is gone. He chopped it off the night Peter Maher slobbered on the feet of Marvin Hart at Hot Springs. The demon Peter is Joe's uncle and Joe is for Pete first last, and all the time. The Washington manager says his soup strainer shall not sprout again until Pete is champion of the world.

Among the first of the visiting athletes to get together were Hickman and White. These two are partners in a sporting goods trust at Washington, and each handed a report to the other of sales made on the training trip. The doctor is a hustler. He disposed of five pairs of spiked shoes, one mitt, and a tennis bat. Hickman is slower and more conservative. The terrific home run swatter sold twelve bats to himself and induced Rube Waddell, whom he met in Texas, to take one pair of elk hide shoe laces on long time payments.

White Looks for Rakeoff.

White was so disgusted with Hick's showing that he worked up a little side line here. The doctor bought a $2 hat this morning, and then steered Hart, Hahn, and Sullivan against the same game. After the last sale White went back and asked the man if he did not get something off for boosting the sales.

"Certainly," said the man. "Whenever you get any dust on your hat come in and we will brush it off."

Shortly before noon Mr. N. Altrock entered to report and prove to Jones that he had not mired down in the pitfalls of a large and wicked city. He had spent his time in modest social diversion at the Peerless Literary club. Nick said his father had worked hard all winter with a shoemaker's awl digging from his beard the confetti rammed into it by frantic rooters during the big celebration at Chi. last fall. Mr. Altrock did not stop for lunch. He said he would drop down to the club and dally with some fried terrapin knuckles and pigs' feet.

Sox Meet Coal Oil Johnnie.

What, with hustle into town at noon, eat, play ball, then eat some more, and hustle out again for Cincy, the Sox had no time to view the Evansville wonders of nature other than Cap Knoll's ball team. But while at Terre Haute in the early morning Coal Oil Johnnie Jones steered a small party of scientists on a sight seeing tour. His list included Mr. B. Sullivan, appendicitis expert; Dr. G. Harry White, tooth carpenter; and Mr. P. Dougherty, who knows much about oil fields and left fields.

The objects of interest inspected were the freak oil well, the banks of the Wabash far away, and the eighteen karat gold statue of Mordecai Brown, standing on a solid silver base in the Terre Haute hall of fame. That fair city also is noted for a ball team that sent cold chills chasing along the spines of the Sox.

But when he sees an oil derrick sticking up in the air our Coal Oil Johnnie forgets about the national pastime. As yet his lease holdings are not as great as John D.'s, but all the same Jones can tell the oil king a few things about gushers, squirters, pumpers, drippers, leakers, and oosers.

Freak Oil Well Inspected.

Soon after daylight Jones and his scientists were beating a path from the hotel to the freak oil well. For fifteen years Jones and the freak well have known each other. The lecture the Boss del Mundo spieled off was alive with human interest ideas. Every twenty-four hours, Jones said, the well pumps 500 barrels of salt water and fifteen barrels of oil worth about $1 per. The salt water, Jones said, would be fine for sailors to go to sea in, but Terre Haute has no sailors or ships. Therefore, the raging brine is allowed to percolate the banks of the Wabash far away.

When inspired by oil wells Jones permits a thin streak of poetry to creep into his language. Crude petroleum lubricates the hinges of his weary baseball, barn storming brains and gives the beholder a glimpse at the gentler side of his nature. Oil will soothe life's rugged pathway to beat the band, Jones remarked in the course of his lecture. Any athlete who had a freak well in his back yard need not burrow around the squash belt to cross bats with and vs. the bushy boys in Mardi Gras regalia. Not on your party ticket, Jones said. He would just pluck his weekly Sporting Life from the rural free delivery box and listen to the greasy dollars gurging in the tank.

Jones as an Oil Expert.

In the language of Prof. J. Bardell, the appendicitis expert told Jones he had said something and the lecturer advised Sully to believe it. Jones then dragged his party across the street to where a steam drill was handing the earth some solar plexus punches at the rate of forty-five per minute. It was the intention of Jones to lean against the derrick and wait until the oil gushed up and sample it, but when the man said there would be nothing doing for a month, the Boss del Mundo sighed and went back to the beanery. The oil bug has started something. Should Comiskey lose a bunch of his star athletes he can hang the blame on Jones.

Large numbers of the Sox are looking up the price of freak oil wells with a view to retiring to the single life. The picture Jones drew of the free delivery box and the oily dollars in the tank looks good to the cinder coated athletes.

Oozy Ed Walsh will pitch against the reds tomorrow.

Plans Joint Meeting of Bowlers.

Cincinnati, O., April 4.—President Herrmann of the American Bowling congress today announced he would call a meeting of the executives of the American, National, Canandian, and Western congresses in May or June for the purpose of putting the sport under one governing body. The meeting, however, is contingent on a favorable report from Col. Hager of Louisville.

OWNERS TELL OF CUP RACE.

BILLINGS AND SMATHERS TESTIFY IN TROTTING CASE.

Expected Crowd Is on Hand in New York Court to Hear What Principals in Trial Have to Say, but Some Relish Is Taken Out of Evidence by Fact That One of the Men Now Owns Both Horses—Spear's Statements Are Branded as False.

New York, April 5.—[Special.]—C. K. G. Billings, owner of Lou Dillon, and Elmer E. Smathers, owner of Maj. Delmar, both were examined today at the continuation of the trial before Justice Greenbaum and a jury in the Supreme court in the suit brought by the Memphis Trotting association in which Billings, the largest stockholder, seeks to recover from Smathers the gold cup that was awarded him three years ago when Maj. Delmar beat Lou Dillon.

There was a large and expectant crowd of trotting devotees on hand to hear the owners testify. Some relish was taken out of the evidence, however, by the knowledge that Billings now owned both horses, having bought Maj. Delmar at Smathers 'sale some time ago.

Smathers Says Spear Falsified.

Smathers testified first and told of the sale of his horses. He denied he ever had made any overtures to anybody looking to the "fixing" of Lou Dillon so his gelding could beat her. He testified further that not only was the testimony of one of his former stable employés, George W. Spear, to this effect false, but that he had really discharged Spear because he had sent the Smathers' mare, Alice Barnes, to the post when she was plainly unfit. Smathers denounced Spear's story that he—Smathers—had told Spear he would give $5,000 to beat Lou Dillon with Major Delmar as an unqualified falsehood.

"Did you ever enter into a conspiracy to stop Lou Dillon," Smathers was asked.

Tells of the Race.

Smathers' description of the race differed considerably from that given on the stand by Billings' trainers and retainers. He said Delmar scored from the mare three times before the first heat, and then when the heat itself was on, Smathers driving Delmar and Billings the mare, the pair kept head and head right up to the half. Billings shook his whip at the mare, said Smathers, when they got to the half mile post, and she showed signs of dropping back. But the mare seemed to be beaten, and never came up again. When Smathers reached the three-quarters post he looked around and slowed up, seeing the race was won. His only idea about the race was that Lou Dillon had quit on meeting a faster horse.

Billings, whose testimony was allowed to come in, though the plaintiff's case was closed because of his absence in the west until today, gave directly opposite testimony. He said his mare had broken once while scoring to the starting post, a thing she never had done before. But outside of that time he felt she had scored against Delmar at every trial before the heat.

Billings Says Mare "Died Out."

"We started level," said Billings, "but after leaving the quarter pole I called on Lou to go ahead. For the first time in my experience, she failed to respond. She spurted for a few yards, but then she died down, and though I touched her with the whip, she would not respond. At the half, and even before it, she began to die out, and Smathers went by me. All I could do was of no use. She couldn't come up to the front again, though I had never known her to fail me before. I could not understand it."

Billings then testified he owned two-thirds of the stock of the Memphis Trotting association, and that he had furnished to Murray Howe, secretary of the association, the necessary funds for prosecuting the present litigation.

Orlando Hammond, a lawyer, who saw the race, said he had heard Billings say Lou Dillon had been sick for two weeks. Billings denied this statement.

MINERALITES DO WELL IN EAST.

Frank Brill, Back from Atlantic City, Tells of Successful Trip of Chicago Bowlers.

Frank Brill of the Mineralites, one of the three Chicago teams that competed in the tournament of the National Bowling association at Atlantic City, N. J., returned yesterday well satisfied with the success of the trip.

The team is well up in the five men event and is not likely to finish worse than fourth. The Chicagoans were anxious to roll the picked team of Cleveland, but were prevented by an accident to Gilbert of Cleveland. At Atlantic City the Chicago men arrived the day the Clevelanders were rolling in the championship and tried to get another match, but the Ohioans did not appear to be anxious for a battle.

Jimmy Blouin was the star of the trip, winning eleven out of thirteen individual matches played. In all the games played the Mineralites won close to $1,000.

Brill says the Atlantic City alleys were good, but the seating accommodations were poor. All loaded balls were thrown out and one team that was five minutes late was not allowed to roll. An innovation in pin spotters was a feature, a metal pin coming up through the center of each pin spot. These were raised by a lever and the pins had holes bored in their bases. When the pins were spotted the metal pins were pulled below the surface by means of a lever, leaving the wooden pins directly on their respective spots.

ENTRY LIST BREAKS RECORD.

Secretary Howard of Illinois Bowling Association Announces 172 Five Men Teams in for Tourney.

Secretary Howard of the Illinois Bowling association went home last night with a case of "charley horse" as the result of opening up a record breaking list of entry blanks for the tenth annual state championship tournament, which will start on Saturday next at Schindler's alleys.

All previous records were relegated to the shade, and as there still are a few belated downstate entries to come the high water mark has not yet been definitely fixed. However, the judge was able to count up 172 five men teams, 349 doubles, and 648 singles, which means the event will require three weeks to run.

Outside representation is particularly strong, Peoria entering two teams, Joliet, Rockford, and Blue Island two, Granite City, Waukegan, Lake Forest, Chicago Heights, Arlington Heights, Lockport, and Lyons all having one. Aurora, however, is the star of the outside towns with nine clubs, the best representation ever made outside of Chicago by a single city since the first meet was held at Mussey's in 1897.

New American Hurdle Record.

New York, April 5.—Harry Hillman of the New York A. C. broke the 220 yard American indoor low hurdle record tonight at the Military Athletic league games in Brooklyn. His mark was :26 1-5.

Ex-Champion Cyclist Dead.

New Haven, Conn., April 5.—[Special.]—Edward Hausman, amateur tandem bicycle champion in 1890 with George Collett, died of tuberculosis, aged 31 years. He created world's motor records at Ormond beach four years ago. Hausman was most prominent in cycling at the time Earl Peabody of Chicago was at the zenith of his fame. Peabody, Collett, Hausman, Kramer, and Dawson were the amateur stars of that year.

STIRRING FINISH AT BENNING TRACK

RADTKE RIDES WINNER.

Form Followers Get Setback, Five Heavily Played Favorites Being Beaten.

Washington, D. C., April 5.—A more stirring finish than that in the fourth event at Bennings today rarely is witnessed on a racecourse. Radtke, on the second choice, Fred Littlefield's Jubilee, after getting away in the lead, was unable to maintain the position, the favorite, Ben Cole of the Columbia stables, evening up with him on the turn. Together the two horses swept through the stretch, with the favorite a trifle in the lead. Just before the wire was reached, Radtke, by a supreme effort, got Jubilee's nose in front, barely winning.

With fine weather and a fast track the talent experienced a series of setbacks, five heavily played favorites losing.

The first downfall of the followers of form came in the opening event, a handicap at six furlongs, in which Graziallo, the favorite, got no part of the money. Radtke had the mount, but he could not keep the old horse up with the pacemakers. Tickle was the best at the weights, for she went to the front at the half mile pole and galloped home five lengths to the good, in 1:23 1-5. T. Hitchcock Jr.'s Golf Ball hung on well under a drive and beat J. E. Madden's Faust a head for the place.

Long Shot Is Winner.

Bilfil, a 12 to 1 shot, trained by Willie Shields, won the second event for maiden 2 year olds, at four and a half furlongs. Perry Belmont's Black Domino made the pace until well into the homestretch, where he stopped under pressure, Bilfil, who had been running up meanwhile, beating him by four lengths in :57 1-5.

Wabash Queen provided a mild sort of killing in the third race, for platers, at six and a half furlongs. She made all the running and returned a comparatively easy winner by a length, in 1:23. Willie Shields' Quadrille, game under punishment, took the place by a length from T. M. Cassidy's Greene.

Buttons, the second choice, was far away the best in the last race at a mile and forty yards. He breezed home six lengths in front of Euripides.

TOO FAST FOR PETER STERLING

Odds-On Favorite in City Park Feature Is Defeated by John L. Inglis.

New Orleans, La., April 5.—[Special.]—The mile condition race, the feature number at City park today, was thought to be at the mercy of Peter Sterling, and he was heavily backed at odds on. He helped to force the pace, but only under sufferance, for John L. Inglis was much the best.

Farrow let him rate in behind to the stretch and then sent him on to win easily, while Peter Sterling and John Smulski fought it out for place, the former getting the position.

John Smulski met with some interference at the half mile, and Lloyd claimed a foul. Summaries:

First race, ⅞ mile, selling — My Dulcie, 106 pounds [Pickens], 3 to 5, won; Ever Near, 7 to 2, second; Jehane, 30 to 1, third. Time, 1:29 4-5.

SIX HORSES FALL AT OAKLAND.

Sensational Accident Results in Race in Which Tenana Breaks Neck—Escape of Jockeys a Miracle.

San Francisco, Cal., April 5.—[Special.]—A sensation developed in the running of the fifth race at Oakland this afternoon. Rounding the far turn, Tanana fell and broke his neck through being crowded against the rail. Elmdale, Peligroso, Silvestro, Wicklow, and Calendar also fell through the accident. That the jockeys escaped serious injury was a miracle. A. Walsh had his shoulder wrenched, while C. Williams was struck on the back by one of the horses which fell over him. The two favorites, Elmdale and Wicklow, came down, and several books did not pay out a dollar to the race. Alta Spa, the winner, was at 30 to 1. Summaries:

First race—Creston, 3 to 5; Love of Gold, 5 to 2; Brook Leaf, 9 to 1.

Second race—The Skipper, 10 to 1; Judge, 3 to 1; Billy Mayham, 6 to 5.

Third race—Fred Bent, 7 to 2; Titus II., 7 to 2; Paddy Lynch, 20 to 1.

Fourth race—Lisaro, even; Mary F., 9 to 2; Romaine, 3 to 1.

Fifth race—Alta Spa, 30 to 1; Bon Vivant, 13 to 1; Silver Line, 15 to 1.

Sixth race—Edith James, 11 to 5; Yada, 13 to 10; Oratorian, 5 to 1.

BOXING LID COMING OFF.

LOCAL SPORTS LOOK FOR RESUMPTION OF GAME.

Belief Mayor-Elect Busse Will Permit Some Big Shows with Proper Restrictions—Denial That Summerfield and Essig Have Rented Dexter Park Pavilion at Stockyards—They Admit, Though, They Have an Option on Place if Sport Opens.

[BY GEORGE SILER.]

Local followers of the boxing game were given a pleasant shock yesterday when they learned that Mayor Busse intended to lift the lid which the Harrison and Dunne administrations had placed on the sport.

Word that this would be done did not, however, come from the mayor-elect, and until he gives his word to "pry it loose" there will be nothing doing.

A report was circulated that Sam Summerfield and Charles Essig had leased the Dexter Park pavilion at the stockyards for four years and that they had practically perfected arrangements to stage a number of first class bouts in the near future. The men named deny all knowledge of the contemplated show, but admit they have secured an option on the pavilion to be prepared to start in business directly they receive the word.

It has been repeatedly reported that Mr. Busse, if elected, would permit boxing shows, provided they were run on clean lines, and that he would not tolerate shows in handball courts, back of saloons, or in cheap halls, nor issue permits to every Tom, Dick, and Harry regardless of their standing or their ability to handle them. What he will permit, it is inferred, will be shows at the two big clubs, the C. A. A. and the New Illinois A. C., and probably a pretentious club on each side of the river, but managed by the right people.

There is an old saying that "politics makes strange bedfellows," and the saying fits a number of fight promoters who have been boasting of having the boxing game by the horns. Some of these were dyed in the wool democrats during the Harrison and Dunne régime, but today, with a possibility of the resumption of the game, presto change! they are and always were republican to the backbone. Some of them, taking time and circumstances by the forelock, were so bold they made efforts to rent the west side ball park to hold boxing shows in the open, but, thanks to Mr. Murphy's better knowledge of right from wrong, they were turned down. The city is ripe for boxing. The sporting public demands and craves it, and Mayor Busse undoubtedly favors it, but it would be advisable for those who intend to embark in the fight promoting business and for those who are in close touch with the mayor and have been promised privileges in that line to wait until they receive word to "go ahead."

A number of prospective promoters undoubtedly will be disappointed, and they, as is generally the case, will become "knockers," the boxing game's worst enemy.

It was reported that Ben Schwab knocked out "Young" Mahoney in the first round of a finish fight on the north side last night, that a $300 purse was the incentive, and that Eddie Boyle was the third man in the ring. It is affairs of this kind that are detrimental to the sport.

M'GOVERN OUT OF SANITARIUM.

Fighter Is Released When His Wife Insists—May Pay Daily Visits to Institution.

New York, April 5.—Sam Harris, McGovern's former manager, said today that although McGovern had left the sanitarium at Stamford a cottage had been engaged for him in that city, and he would visit the sanitarium daily and continue to be under the observation of Dr. Given. He will be subject to no restraint, however. Harris said the doctors went to Stamford today at Mrs. McGovern's request, found Terry much improved but not entirely recovered, and recommended that he remain at the sanitarium for a few months. Mrs. McGovern, however, insisted he be allowed to leave it, and as he never was committed by a court it was decided to engage a cottage for him in Stamford where he could visit the sanitarium each day.

Dodds was sent in to stroke. Three varsity, two four oared, three freshmen, and one mixed crew went out on the lake this afternoon.

Yale Gunners Beaten.

AT LOCAL BASEBALL OFFICES.

Johnson and Taylor Discuss Troubles of Boston Club—Will Attend Cincinnati Feast.

In an effort to straighten out the affairs of the Boston American league club President Ban Johnson and President John I. Taylor of the Hub club held another conference yesterday, but neither would give out any information further than that no one had yet been decided on for manager. Mr. Taylor did say there was nothing in the talk that Jimmy Collins might again take up the reins. He also said no player now connected with the Boston club would be made manager.

President Johnson, President Comiskey of the Sox, President Taylor, President "Tip" O'Neill of the Western league, George Davis, Frank Isbell of the Sox, and John Agnew, left late last night for Cincinnati, where a banquet in honor of the world's champions is to be given tonight. President Johnson will be present at the meeting of the national commission to be held today while President Taylor will join his ball club there.

President O'Neill's trip is due to concern over the decision to be made by the commission in the Topeka case. He said he thought the commission would stand by the previous decision, which gives Topeka to the Western league.

NEW YORK STOCKS RISE.

FURTHER ADVANCES SCORED BY ALMOST ENTIRE LIST.

Relaxation in Money Market and Revival of Supporting Orders from Influential Houses Bring About a Better Tone—Profit Taking in Last Hours Causes Falling Off from the Best Prices of Day, but Many Net Gains Remain.

[BY A SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.]

NEW YORK, April 5.—[Special.]—The continued relaxation in the money market, combined with a revival of supporting orders from a source regarded as representing influencial dealers, today forced wider advances in the prices of stocks, and, although profit taking in the later hours caused a falling away from the best prices the close was at an advance over that of the previous day.

The Harriman Pacifics and Reading were centers of heavy trading, giving rise to the supposition that forces which have been out of the market for some time again have entered trading. Southern Pacific shared fully in the movement, and was regarded as giving the motive for it in its extraordinary showing of net earnings for February published yesterday.

A rebound in the price of copper in London was responded to by the rise in Amalgamated Copper here. Many other movements centered around these or followed from their influence. This made up a market of great variety and frequent irregularity, the rise in fresh stocks being taken advantage of to market others.

Commisison houses reported a general revival of interest in the market on the part of clients of the speculative class, an element regarded from the stock market point of view as making up the general public, whose entry into the market is regarded always as marking an important stage in speculation. The appearance of this element was taken advantage of, as usual, for some heavy profit taking on the part of the more professional element.

The prospect of a strong bank statement tomorrow was an influence in the dealings. The subtreasury has contributed to the banks since the last statement was compiled $12,175,000, and it is believed that this measures about the actual gain in cash for the week, as the movement of currency to and from the interior seems about to have balanced.

WALSH BILLS TURNED IN.

TWO INDICTMENTS FOUND WEEK AGO REPORTED TO COURT.

Many Charges of Misapplication of Funds and Credits of the Chicago National Bank Made Against Former Head of That Institution—Accused Also of Sending to Controller Ridgely a Statement Containing Numerous False Entries.

Two indictments, comprising 175 counts, were returned yesterday against John R. Walsh by the federal grand jury. The voting of the indictments was reported in THE TRIBUNE a week ago. One indictment charges the misapplication of the funds and credits of the Chicago National bank, of which Walsh was president, and in the other he is charged with making false entries in his report to the controller of the treasury, submitted a month before the bank was closed.

These indictments were returned by a grand jury drawn from the new jurisdiction of the northern district of Illinois. Walsh already has pleaded not guilty to an indictment of 160 counts returned last February, and his trial has been set for Oct. 15.

The legal effect of these last indictments probably will be to secure the government another cause of action should Walsh be victorious at the trial next fall.

Misuse of Funds Alleged.

In the indictment charging a misapplication of the bank funds there are fifty or sixty transactions alleged and these involve more than $3,500,000. These transactions are divided into the following three general classes, upon each of which one count of the indictment is based:

Sums credited to John R. Walsh's pricate account as the proceeds of "memorandum notes."

Sums credited to defendant's personal account through sale of bonds in railroad or other enterprises in which he was interested to the Chicago National bank.

Payments made by Walsh from the money thus credited to him to sustain his railroad and other properties.

False Report to Ridgely.

The charge of making false entries was not made by the former grand jury as it could take cognizance of nothing that occurred after March 5, 1905. The report to Controller Ridgely was made Nov. 9, 1905, and according to the indictment contains the following false entries:

Loans and discounts on which officers or directors of the bank were liable either as payer or indorser were given as $245,500; should have been $2,913,500.

Loans and discounts on which officers and directors were not liable entered as $10,658,226.64; should have been $7,990,226.64.

Bond securities held by the bank entered at $3,103,095.13; should have been $5,771,095.13.

Failed to enter excessive loans to the amount of $2,668,000.

Bond to Be Fixed on Monday.

The jury's report was made to Judge A. B. Anderson, who was called from Indianapolis by Judge K. M. Landis when the litigation against the former banker began. The court instructed District Attorney Sims to inform the defendant of the indictments. Walsh is expected to appear before Judge Anderson on Monday to give bond, and the time for pleading will be fixed then. The amount of Walsh's bond will hardly be less than $50,000, which was the sum required when the other indictment was returned.

BUGS ROUT WHEAT BEARS

DAMAGE REPORTS BASIS OF A BIG UPTURN IN PRICES.

General Covering by Oversold Shorts and Reinstating of Long Lines Are Features of Unusually Active Market—Continued Dry Weather Adds to Uneasiness Over Situation in the Southwest—Coarser Grains Higher on Improved Buying.

In one of the liveliest and most interesting sessions in many weeks wheat yesterday not only recovered the sharp losses sustained the day before, but worked to a good advance. Closing within a shade of the top, the market showed net gains of 1.@1½c for May, 1⅛@ showed net gains of 1⅜@1½c for May, 1⅛@ for December. Failure of rains to materialize as per official forecast, inability of the weather bureau to promise immediate relief to the droughty sections of the west and southwest, and a flood of sensational "green bug" damage reports created mild panic among shorts and prompted bulls to renewed buying. The temper of the general trade last night was as bullish as it was bearish the night before, many who had belittled the unfavorable crop advices plainly showing nervousness.

The coarser grains also scored good advances, trading in corn and oats showing increased activity. Ruling easier early, the provision list strengthened, largely in sympathy with the improved tone in grains, closing a little firmer.

Liverpool Ignores American Break.

Liverpool ignored the bad break in wheat values here the day before, finishing ⅛d higher, this showing stirring smaller shorts who had oversold in the previous session to covering sufficient to give the market a mild boost. This class of buying increased on the continued general dryness in sections that had been promised moisture and on the prediction of fair weather. Offerings came out slowly on the bulges, and some of the holders who sold early were arrayed on the buying side later. As the session progressed the volume of damage reports assumed the proportions of a deluge, many unfavorable advices coming from sources that heretofore have put cold water on the injury talk. Expert Snow wired from Medford, Okla., that since his last trip the "bugs" had spread over a wide territory, leaving undeniable evidence of damage to oats and wheat in their wake. Some of the advices from Oklahoma indicated that many fields were totally ruined and that hitherto unaffected sections were full of the pests. Kansas, on which the eyes of the trade have been focused for a long time, sent in reports more serious than any received in the past, the insects being active in some of the best producing regions. Newton, the home of Capt. Phillips, who has persistently scouted the idea of "bug" damage in the Sunflower state, wired that the insects were plentiful and rapidly spreading. On top of such "scarey" talk came word that deductions from correspondents' communications indicated that Kansas would have a yield of about 130,000,000 bu, against a crop of about 82,000,000 bu turned out last year.

Argentine exports for the week aggregated 3,656,000 bu, or about 600,000 bu under the shipments of a year ago, clearances from this country and Canada for the period totaling 3,500,000 bu, against 2,156,000 bu cleared in the corresponding period last year. The domestic movement again exceeded that of a year ago, primary arrivals amounting to 672,000 bu, compared to 442,000 bu in 1906. Duluth and Minneapolis reported 490 cars, against 347 cars last year.

Nebraska More Apprehensive.

Nebraska wired that the continued dry weather was increasing the apprehension of growers, and many advices from Ohio, Missouri, Indiana, and Michigan were of the sort to make shorts uneasy. "Scientists" figure that conditions in Kansas are favorable to a duplication of the vast damage wrought by "bugs" and drought in Oklahoma. Some men whose word is given much weight have come forth for the first time with messages indicating that the situation in the banner wheat state is becoming serious.

There was big buying of wheat by interests that provided much of the pressure the day before, purchases in several instances involving more than the amounts unloaded in the previous session. Some of the more hopeful bulls added to their lines, and there was important buying by concerns that usually represent northwesterners and southwesterners. The final half hour witnessed a rush of buying, numerous prominent traders who had done little previously being among the best bidders. Commission houses reported that many of the advices from the southwest were accompanied by buying orders, thus indicating that the country traders are taking more stock in the talk of damage. Final prices for wheat were 77@77⅛c for May, 79⅛@79⅜c for July, 80⅛c for September, and 81⅞c for December. Early the May sold at 75½c, the July at 77⅜c, and the September at 80⅛c.

Corn Active and Firmer.

Unusual activity characterized the trade in corn, which displayed firmness throughout, closing at advances of ⅝c for May, ⅝c for July, and ½c for September. Besides the strength in wheat, beneficial influences were light local receipts—265 cars—firmness at Liverpool, nothing in the export way, from Argentina, and a marked improvement in the cash demand. Big interests that recently have been pressing the market gave good support, and their buying stirred many of the smaller traders to buying. The buying of July was especially good and the investment support to September was of good proportions.

The east was a good bidder for kiln dried corn, and prices at the cash tables were sharply higher. The week's clearances from this country were 2,917,000 bu, against 1,845,000 bu last week, and 3,104,000 bu last year. The straits of Mackinac have been cleared of the ice clogging, and numerous corn laden vessels will depart from Chicago soon. Primary receipts were 775,000 bu, against 326,000 bu a year ago. Estimated local arrivals for today were 316 cars.

Sharp Advance in Oats.

There was increased activity in the oats market, and prices were given a good lift on buying for big interests and covering by shorts who recently had oversold themselves. Final prices showed net gains of ⅝@¾c for May, in which there was more marked evidence of congestion, ⅝c for July, and ⅝c for September. The more distant months were bought largely on the increasing volume of damage reports from the southwest, where many fields are said to have suffered total loss from the "bug" invasion. Cash oats were higher, with the demand good. Local receipts—121 cars—fell materially under the expectation, the estimate for today being 174 cars.

Provisions Rally After Dip.

Hog products ruled easier early on scattered local selling, firming later with the grains and on speculative buying. Final prices showed advances of 2½@10c for pork, 5@7½c for lard, and about 2½c for ribs. Local hog arrivals fell under the estimate, the receipts at all leading western points—82,500—showing 2,500 larger than those of the similar day last year. The volume of business transacted was not large.

Rye Slow and Firm.

Rye was slow but firm. Receipts were 3 cars. No. 2, free on board, was quoted 67@69c, with a sale at 68¼c; No. 3, 60@67c, with a sale at 62c; No. 4, 50@58c.

Barley offerings were light, and the trade consequently quiet, but with a firm tone. Feed was quoted 55@59c; malting, 60@69c; screenings, 40@56c. Receipts were 17 cars.

Flaxseed was dull and ½c lower, in sympathy with weaker outside markets. No. 1 Northwestern was quoted $1.18 and No. 1 $1.11. Receipts here were 1 car, 48 cars at Minneapolis, and 85 cars at Duluth.

Timothy seed was in good demand, with offerings light. Contract spot was quoted $4.30 and September about $4.60. Country lots ranged from $3.00@4.00. Clover seed was a shade easier at $15.35 for contract spot and $11.25@14.50 for cash lots.

INTERESTING TRADE GOSSIP ON 'CHANGE.

Wheat traders yesterday were treated to as varied an assortment of "green bug" and dry weather damage reports from the southwest as any time this spring. Contradictory reports were fainter, while the volume of bad advices showed a steady growth, which caused the shorts to become uneasy and to make the most conservative believe that there was at least cause for serious concern. In addition to the Snow report, which was bullish, Edward Updike, who is now going over the same territory he did three weeks ago, when he found no bugs, wired that from Ponca City to Guthrie, seventy-five miles, wheat had been damaged more than 75 per cent, and that the situation was growing worse every day. All wheat as far as Fort Worth reported about the same. "Bugs" spreading fast. Missouri, Kansas, and northern Oklahoma all sent their quota of "bug" news. In the vicinity of Newton, Kas., there seemed to be some discrepancy in opinions, Capt. Phillips wiring that there were no "bugs" anywhere around there and that wheat was looking fine, while Lake's man wired that "bugs" had been found there. Iowa entered the lists with a few claims of damage, while several prominent houses operating in Nebraska, Iowa, and Missouri and throughout the southwest had messages expressing much concern over weather conditions.

Heavy buying of wheat by the Bartlett-Frazier house early on the strength of bad crop advices from the southwest took all of the offerings off the market and caused general covering of shorts. The Bartlett house was a heavy seller on Thursday and also on Wednesday, and the sharp reversal in their operations had the trade guessing until the issuance of the Snow report, which confirmed the reports of damage from "green bugs." Comstock, Logan-Bryan, Ware-Leland, Northern Grain, Lake, Pringle-Fitch-Rankin, and Updike were all conspicuous on the buying side of the market. Partridge was a buyer late in the session and was supposed to be acting for Armour. The St. Anthony Grain company sold July on the advance, and there was scattered profit taking by early buyers. In corn and oats Bartlett-Frazier were also the heaviest buyers. Comstock was a late buyer of corn. Helmholz sold corn. Nye-Jenks, Barrell, Marfield, and Comstock were on the buying side of oats. On the advance there was an increase in the offerings, some of the buyers of the last few days taking profits. Patten was a good buyer of September lard. Clifton sold lard, and there was a little selling for foreign account.

B. W. Snow, the crop expert, who made an examination of the wheat fields of the southwest a few weeks ago and found conditions fine, is again in the field and is sending reports confirming recent alarming advices. The following message corroborating the most radical "bug" damage reports was the chief factor in the advance in wheat. He wired from Medford, Okla.: "Yesterday afternoon drove in north part Canadian county. Oats destroyed and being plowed up. Wheat badly damaged. Aphis swarming in every field. Spots first infected are entirely bare, and from these centers bug has spread to all part of field so that all now is as bad as spots were three weeks ago. I see nothing to indicate any check in activity. The winged females are numerous and high winds have aided the spread. From El Reno to Enid, sixty miles of best wheat district, big bare spots show up from car window, with fields taking on the yellow tinge that shows general infection. The situation is distinctly bad. Good rains last night will give plant more power of resistance than when dry."

"We believe that this is the time to buy oats for spring and early summer consumption," said Bartlett-Frazier in At-The-Market. "Spot oats in Chicago have recently sold two to three cents under the high point, owing to larger receipts. It must be remembered that country shippers have about cleaned up their corn and are now shipping in the oats which they have held back on account of scarcity of cars. This run of oats may continue a few days longer, but buyers should not be deceived by it. Primary receipts at western markets during the last three weeks have been about 10,700,000 bu. During that time the visible supply has decreased 1,400,000 bu, showing an enormous consumption. Farmers' deliveries are small, and will continue to be so. We believe that country elevators will soon be cleaned out if shipments continue for a few days longer at the present rate. And then there will be another upturn in prices."

Secretary T. B. Grow of the free labor bureau of Topeka wired B. C. Christopher that he has reports from fifty-one counties in Kansas indicating condition 100. Some of his correspondents estimate the crop at 131,000,000 bu, official last year, 81,830,000 bu. He says they will need 25,000 laborers and that harvest will be two weeks earlier than usual. The only serious damage comes from southwest Oklahoma, where acreage is small.

"The situation in wheat now seems to be framing up more definitely for a change in wheat values with the new crop proposition as a basis," said E. W. Dennis. "It is reasonably sure that California, Oregon, Washington, Texas, Oklahoma, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, and Michigan will all have less wheat than last year. California will be lucky to get 25 per cent of a crop. Texas will be fortunate to get back its seed. And to this list of states of less promise can easily be added Kansas, Missouri, and Nebraska, from the present inroads of the green bug, but a greater menace to the crop in these three states, in the general opinion, is the grave danger from insufficient moisture. Kansas and Nebraska, for instance, have had less than half an inch of rain in sixty days, and the government figures of insufficient moisture are extreme enough to cause apprehension."

In the local cash market offerings of wheat were small of all kinds, but there was apparently just about enough demand to take care of the small quantity for sale. Export business was about nil, foreigners not being inclined to follow the advance. Minneapolis reported the best demand for cash wheat that has been seen there for several weeks. The big millers were paying 2½c over May for No. 1 northern to arrive any time, and were also paying the same for spot wheat. No. 2 northern was quoted ½@1c over May. In the southwest prices were steady relatively. New York reported the export trade quiet, with foreigners for the most part taking but little interest in the market. Cash corn here was ½@1c higher, with a fair demand from the east for kiln dried stuff. Oats were also ½@1c higher. Local sales were 25,000 bu wheat, 150,000 bu corn, and 125,000 bu oats. The seaboard reported 120,000 bu wheat and 25,000 bu corn for export.

The eastern corn demand is expected to be light for the next few weeks, during the germinating season, according to seaboard advices, but after that a big business is looked for both with the united kingdom and the continent. The latter is bidding daily for July to October shipment from the seaboard, but has not bought a great deal since Chicago May worked above 45c. Prices will have but little effect when the buying starts, as it is claimed that America will have to supply the foreign demand almost entirely. Local receivers expect to see local receipts dry up shortly. The country is offering but little corn, and the press of spring work is expected to prevent any increase in receipts for some time.

"Reports from millers in the winter wheat territory, covering the principal producing states, show a high condition for the crop, except in Ohio, Michigan, Oklahoma, and Texas," said the Modern Miller. "In other states the damage is exceptionally small. Most millers say prospects are better than usual at this time of year. The recent heavy frosts have caused apprehensions, but no established damage is revealed as yet. Green bugs have advanced northward into southeast Missouri. This pest has practically destroyed the crop of Texas, and the area of damage is expanding in Oklahoma. Dry weather in the southwest and west, including Nebraska, is creating apprehension."

Several of the larger commission houses claimed to have had more outside buying orders for wheat than had been the case for some time. Hitherto the southwest has sent in a flood of damage reports of all degrees of seriousness, but has been chary of backing up claims with buying orders. Sentiment in general was as bullish last night as it was bearish the night before, and there were more converts to the bull side than for some days. Some of the larger shorts were said to be wavering.

The weekly Argentine cable said the wheat market was weak, with offerings larger. Arrivals from the interior are smaller, with the quality satisfactory. Heavy rains are causing some interruption to plowing. The corn market is steady, but inactive. Arrivals from the interior are nil.

IN THE BOSTON MONEY MARKET.

BOSTON, Mass., April 5.—[Special.]—Trading was fairly good in Boston today. Balakla was the most active stock and the demand came chiefly from one or two houses and was plainly a manipulation by some interested person. Trinity was active, but heavy. North Butte and Old Dominion was strong.

RATES FOR MONEY EASIER

LOANS MADE UNDER 6 PER CENT, BUT NOT BY ALL BANKS.

Wabash Note Refunding Plan—Twin City Rapid Transit Dividend Rate to Be Unchanged—Chicago City Railway Stock Has Another Advance, Going to 185—Union Traction Common at 5⅛—Buying of Boxboard Common Credited to Insiders.

Easier money conditions, both in Chicago and New York, are obtaining. The forecast of today's bank statement, issued yesterday, showed a probable increase in cash by the New York institutions of $12,421,200. Call and time rates there continued steady.

In Chicago money is being loaned under 6 per cent, though not by all the banks. It is understood by them, however, that the 6 per cent minimum cannot be maintained much longer. This is admitted by institutions which have not yet loaned below that figure.

Wabash Notes.

It is announced that the present plan of the Wabash management for refunding the $6,160,000 three year 5 per cent notes, which mature on May 10, calls for an extension of the present notes and the payment in cash to holders who do not care to participate in the extension plan.

However, George J. Gould is not in New York, and E. J. Jeffery announced that the plan is still under consideration, and to say that an issue of three year notes would be made is at least premature.

No Change in Twin City Common.

Action is about due on the quarterly dividends on Twin City Rapid Transit common stock, and announcement comes from New York that pending the present agitation and legislation for lower passenger rates in Minneapolis and St. Paul no change will be made in the rate, which for some time has been 1¼ per cent quarterly.

Gold Supply and Prosperity.

"The Gold Supply and Prosperity," compiled and edited by Byron W. Holt, editor of Moody's magazine, has been received. The fact that prices of commodities and labor have been advancing for years is a matter of universal knowledge. Why this advance has taken place is the subject of discussion in the book. A number of investigators and authorities have contributed to a symposium on this subject and a considerable portion of the book is made up of papers from such men. Among them are Maurice M. Uhleman, Prof. John B. Clark, F. A. Vanderlip, Prof. Irving Fisher, Ellis H. Roberts, and others.

Dividend Declared.

The United States Rubber company declared the regular quarterly dividends of 2 per cent on its first preferred, and old preferred stock, and 1½ per cent on its second preferred stock, payable April 30, to stock of record April 15.

Chicago Stocks.

Chicago City railway had another advance yesterday, going to 185. Ten days ago the stock sold at 150. The jump yesterday was one of 25 points over the last previous sale. Little of the stock is offered since most of it is held by the persons who took over the control of the company several years ago at $200 a share.

North and West Chicago were but moderately active. While there is a fair distribution of these securities locally, there is a belief on the part of the holders that inasmuch as the traction question is settled the value of the properties cannot fail to improve, and the securities command a better price.

Union Traction Shares.

Chicago Union Traction common sold at 5⅛. There is but little equity for this stock under any circumstances. But, speculatively, it should show further improvement, based on the general belief as to what will be the ultimate outcome of the traction situation.

National Biscuit common was steady. The preferred sold at 113½. For some reason this issue was allowed to sell off and does not recover rapidly from the low price. The common, however, has been better handled.

United Boxboard common was the most active stock. The buying is generally credited to inside interests. A few shares of American Strawboard sold at 38.

New York exchange sold yesterday in Chicago at par.

IN FOREIGN MONEY MARKETS.

LONDON, April 5.—Money was abundant and cheap in the market today and discounts were easy. A cheerful tone prevailed on the stock exchange, but the volume of business was limited. Quotations advanced in nearly all sections.

Foreigners were dull, with the exception of copper shares, which continued active, Rio Tinto marking a fresh advance. Mexican rails enjoyed better support on dividend expectations. Japanese Imperial 6s closed at 103⅝.

Americans opened above parity and remained quietly steady until the receipt of the New York opening prices when they became active, Southern Pacific advancing 2 points in a few minutes. Baltimore and Ohio and Union Pacific were the features. Canadian Pacific was active, fluctuating widely. Grand Trunk was firm.

BERLIN, April 5.—Prices on the boerse today opened firm. Americans were higher upon the New York quotations, but later they declined upon an unsatisfactory cable dispatch regarding the iron market.

PARIS, April 5.—Prices on the bourse today opened unsteady, with trading inactive, but the market closed firm. Russian Imperial 4s were not quoted. Russian bonds of 1904 closed at 490.00.

EGGS ARE IN GOOD DEMAND.

Eggs were in good demand at the recent decline and a steadier tone was noted. Large quantities of eggs are going into storage, while the prevailing low prices are influencing an enormous consumption. These two factors are making it possible to take care of the enormous receipts, which are running about double what they were a year ago. Veal was a shade easier. The poultry market was quoted steady, with supplies fairly liberal. Arrivals of strawberries were fairly heavy, but the quality of the receipts was uneven, the Louisiana berries particularly being irregular in grading. As a result there was a wide range of quotations.

To Men of Money

I want to interest a man of large means in an investment secured by property of enormous value, producing a staple for which the demand has exceeded the supply for the past five years. This year in the following ratio:

Annual Increase in Consumption, 20 per cent.
Annual Increase in Production, 8 per cent.

This is not a proposition for small investors.

I ask an opportunity to show you the stability and money-making possibilities of the enterprise. Every facility for exhaustive investigation freely extended. Will talk with principals only—strong, responsible high grade men who have cash available and who would interest themselves in a high class proposition, if they became convinced by personal investigation that it would be highly profitable.

BUYS STATE STREET LOT.

CHAUNCEY KEEP ACQUIRES PROPERTY FOR $165,000.

Ground Is Located South of Congress Street and Improved with Three Story Building—Sale Is at Rate of $4,125 a Front Foot—Presbyterian Hospital Found to Be Purchaser of Zion Structure at Michigan Avenue and Twelfth Street.

Chauncey Keep has made another investment in State street property south of Van Buren street, having bought from Caroline F. Morgan the property at 333-335 for $165,000. The property is 120 feet south of Congress street, on the east side of the street, just north of the old Park, now the Folly theater. The lot is 40x138½ feet, and is improved with a three story and basement building, occupied by the New Era Furniture company.

The building is said to have been given no value in the transaction, so that the sale was at the rate of $4,125 a front foot, and $29.78 a square foot. The board of review valuation is $159,070. E. C. Waller Jr. negotiated the sale.

While Mr. Keep is one of the trustees of the Marshall Field estate, the purchase is said to have been a personal one on his part.

A short time ago Mr. Keep bought from Montgomery Ward the property at 423-425 State street, 40x138 feet, for $85,000.

Hospital Buys Zion Building.

It now transpires that the Presbyterian hospital was the real purchaser of the former Zion building and leasehold interest at the southeast corner of Michigan avenue and Twelfth street, to which William M. Baker took title early in the week from J. Herbert Anderson of Winnipeg for a nominal consideration.

While the officers of the hospital are reticent regarding the purpose of the purchase beyond the statement that it was made for investment purposes and that further plans may be decided on later, it is understood that it was bought for actual hospital purposes, and that it is planned to spend around $100,000 in thoroughly equipping it for this use. In other words, that it is to be a branch of the main hospital, located at Congress and Wood streets. Plans have been about completed for a large addition to the latter, but it is thought possible that these may be changed in view of the recent purchase.

The Michigan avenue and Twelfth street property is 83x131 feet, improved with a seven story building. It was built about world's fair time and was opened as the Imperial hotel.

In 1900 the late John Alexander Dowie bought the building from the Hapson estate for $50,000 and leased the ground for ninety-nine years at an annual rent of $10,000. Mr. Anderson bought the property about a year and a half ago.

In part payment the hospital conveyed to Mr. Anderson property at the southwest corner of Armour avenue and Twenty-sixth street, valued at $50,000. E. C. Waller Jr. negotiated the deal.

Schleutter Sells Flat Property.

Henry W. Schleutter has sold to August W. Flick the flat property in Evanston avenue, 130 feet south of York place, 118x278 feet, for $65,000, including an incumbrance of $41,000 assumed as part of the consideration.

Oliver L. Watson has sold to Thomas J. Woods the flat property at the southwest corner of Kenmore and Leland avenues, 50x125 feet, for $50,000.

E. C. Waller Jr. has sold for Mabel F. Morton of Newark, N. J., to John A. Bloomingston, the property at 1923 Michigan avenue, 30x165 feet, with three story residence, for $25,000 cash. James D. Jarvis represented the seller.

Mr. Waller has also sold for the Post-Graduate school to Frank A. Eckhart, the property at the southeast corner of Armour avenue and Twenty-fourth street, for a consideration said to be $25,000. This places the title for the entire frontage in this street from 219 feet south of Twenty-second street to Twenty-fifth street in Mr. Eckhart, who is holding for the syndicate which bought so largely in there over a year ago.
